Three persons died and 25 were injured, two critically, as result of traffic accidents yesterday in Washington and vicinity.

The dead were:

John C. Gould, 22, of 1711 37th st. nw., who died at 12:15 a.m. today at Casualty Hospital following injuries he received in a motorcycle accident at 1:55 a.m. yesterday. A passenger in a motorcycle driven by William T. Steinkolk, 21, of 3612 S st. nw., he was injured when the motorcycle collided at 2nd and D sts. ne., with an automobile operated by McCoy V. Jones, 39, of 205 D st. ne.

Mrs. Viola Edna Starkey, 54, of 2607 Richmond hwy., Alexandria, Va., pronounced dead last night on arrival at Alexandria Hospital after being struck by a car operated by Arthur G. Coates, 2131 Branch ave, se., on Route 1, 3 miles south of Alexandria.

Cleatus Elmo Sisson, 28, of Shawsville, Va., who was killed instantly at 12:45 a. m. yesterday when his car crashed headon with a truck operated by Aaron Henderson, 31, of Baltimore, on Route 416, a half mile north of Dunkirk, in Calvert County, Md.

Seven of the injured were passengers on a Washington, Maryland & Annapolis bus from Andrews Air Base, which collided with a Capital Transit streetcar about 6:30 p. m. at 2d and East Capitol sts. The streetcar was knocked from its tracks.

Treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and bruises were: Mary Eubank, 17, of 4200 Silver Hill rd., Silver Hill, Md.; Clara Ortman, 75, 2401 Calvert st. nw.; Beatrice Schechter, 45, of 203 Maryland ave., Suitland Park, Md., and Elsie McCallum, 59, of 5481 3d ave., Forestville, Md.

Attlee Narrowly Misses Dousing In Oxford Prank

Oxford, England, May 8. (U.P.)—Frisky undergraduates at Oxford University did a bit of impromptu campaigning tonight for the country-wide local elections to be held this week.

While Prime Minister Clement Attlee was dining in Oriel College, Oxford pranksters let the air out of the tires on his car and left a note advising the Socialist leader to "vote Tory next time."

Later, as Attlee left the college to return to his car, students poured a bucket of cold water from an upstairs window. They missed the Prime Minister by inches.

$100,000 Offered By Chicago Paper For Murder Clews

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—The Chicago Sun-Times said today it will offer $100,000 in rewards for clews that will clear up the first 20 "of a long list of unsolved murders in and around Chicago."

The newspaper said 20 "typical" unsolved cases were selected for a start and that the first "detailed report on an unsolved murder" will appear in its columns Tuesday.

In announcing the offer of a $5000 reward for each of the 20 unsolved cases, the Sun-Times said:

"Somebody—one somebody after another—has information that will bring to justice those who are guilty."

My Wondrous Nats

Reporter Herb Heft, who usually writes this article in the sport pages, was so overwhelmed by Washington's double baseball victory (7-3 and 2-0 over the World Champion Cleveland Indians) yesterday he was left speechless. As a result, Clark Griffith, another Nat rooter, takes over.

CONSARN IT, we beat the world's champions twice yesterday and that proves we're no flukes. No, sir, we're no flukes. We're just beginning to hit our stride. And on the road, too. This is a great joy to me.

That makes it seven straight. I was never more delighted in my life than I was over whipping those Indians twice. Man, that was something. This is a great joy to me.

GRIFFITH

I said several weeks ago that this American League race wouldn't be a walkover for anybody. My team has a great spirit. After they lost those seven straight—and most of 'em were tough luck games to lose, mind you—they convinced me they'd come back. This is a great joy to me.

The great thing about this club is that we've got a new star every day. Along comes another player each day to pick up the club. Yesterday it was Sherry Robertson. He scored both runs in that second game, you know.

AND I'M beginning to like this Eddie Robinson more every day. He's a wonderful ballplayer. And that Sam Dente at shortstop. Consarn it, he's a live one, isn't he? Peps up the whole team. This is a great joy to me.

And I want to say something about that boy who writes this article, what's his name, Herb Heft? Consarn it, he's brought us luck. He sure has. He's helped us a lot. He's got the real spirit, same as my ball club. My, this is a great joy to me.

I said all along we'd be a first division ball club and we will be. I won't predict a pennant for the ball club, but if those boys do win it I think I can get Mr. Truman to come out and throw another spitter for us. My, this is a great joy to me.

Major Issues Still Wait as Congress Lags

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

With the end of the first session of the 81st Congress theoretically only a month and a half away, attention of both House and Senate focuses this week on minor bills while the bulk of President Truman's program remains stalled.

The Senate today will resume what promises to be a prolonged debate on enactment of a sales tax for the District of Columbia. The House will give this week to consideration of a number of small bills, starting with the decennial housing census.

Among the measures the House will consider this week will be HR-3005, the Federal Employe Subsistence and Mileage bill.

But the slow-moving 81st Congress, largely controlled by a coalition of Southern Democrats and Republicans, has yet to consider almost every major bill, foreign and domestic, which President Truman urged last January.

Still facing the Congress are some of these major issues: Social Security revision; increased taxes; revision of the Taft-Hartley law; civil rights legislation; national health insurance; displaced persons legislation and farm legislation.

Federal aid to education has just passed the Senate, and is given a good chance of passing the House. The Senate has adopted a long-range public housing program, and the House is scheduled to take it up, possibly this week or next.

Action on the foreign policy front is just as dilatory as on the domestic front. The Senate will start debate on revision of reciprocal trade legislation, possibly next week, but is not expected to conclude action for at least two weeks and possibly longer.

Still ahead is the North Atlantic Pact, which is certain to provoke serious and very lengthy consideration. Also still awaiting action is the actual appropriation, as distinguished from authorization, of funds for the administration of ECA.

Before taking up the reciprocal trade bill, the Senate will consider the Treasury-Postoffice Appropriation measure. Also pending is a motion by Senator Theodore Green (D., R. I.) to reconsider the vote

Navy Lawyer Standards Hit By McCarran

By the United Press

Chairman Pat McCarran of the Senate Judiciary Committee said yesterday that the Navy needs a corps of lawyers who can qualify at a bar "outside of an officers' club."

The Nevada Democrat said the Navy insists on mixing sea duty with legal training for its would-be lawyers, with the result that only a handful at most are a match for civilian attorneys.

Of all the Navy's past and present judge advocates general, its top legal officers, he said, no more than three were law school graduates admitted to practice before a civilian court. The Navy Department, he added, clings to a belief that "a prerequisite to being the judge advocate general is the training and experience necessary to command a battleship or a division of destroyers."

McCarran aired his complaint in a 35-page letter to Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), of the Senate Armed Services Committee, in which he proposed a long list of changes in a House-approved bill to set up a uniform code of military justice.

A subcommittee is scheduled to resume hearings on the bill today, with Admiral George L. Russell, Navy Judge Advocate General, among the witnesses.

McCarran told Tydings he "earnestly hoped" the subcommittee

260 Big Trucks Stage 'Parkdown' In Pennsylvania

Irwin, Pa., May 8 (AP).—A "parkdown" by drivers protesting the State's weight limits today immobilized 260 giant trailer-trucks on the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

One hundred and sixty drivers abandoned their westbound trucks on the super-highway between here and Midway. An additional 100 eastbound truckers parked in service stations on the outskirts of the Irwin tollgate.

Capt. Andrew J. Hudock said 35 truckers were fined for exceeding the 45,000-pound limit in the 24-hour period ending at 4 p. m. today. Fines ranged from $25 to $50. Several drivers were arrested twice.

'Turtle' Retraces NC-4 Route In First Atlantic Flight in '19

New York, May 8 (AP).—A trim, record-holding Navy patrol bomber took off from Floyd Bennett Field today on a sentimental journey.

The flight of the "Truculent Turtle," a Lockheed P2V-2 Neptune, commemorated the thirtieth anniversary of the first transatlantic flight, made by the plywood and canvas NC-4.

While hundreds of spectators crowded the reviewing stand at the field and three squadrons of Navy fighters droned overhead, the big, black two-engined Turtle taxied out to the runway at 1:05 p. m. (EST).

Aboard were two of the five men who made the historic NC-4 flight.

Rear Admiral Albert C. Read, who piloted the NC-4, and his flight mechanic, Chief Aviation Pilot Eugene Saylor (Smokey) Rhoads, went along on the Turtle "for the ride."

Read said, however, he expected to take over the controls for a spell during the flight.

Asked how many times he had flown the Atlantic, Read replied: "Once—in 1919."

The Turtle's pilot was Comdr. Thomas D. Davies of Chevy Chase, Md., who commanded the plane on its 1946 record nonstop 11,236-mile hop from Perth, Australia, to Columbus, Ohio.

The Turtle, which made a jet-assisted takeoff, will retrace the course of the NC-4. The 1919 flight took 19 days, with several scheduled stops. The Turtle's crossing, to Lisbon, Portugal, will be completed in about 15 hours.

From Lisbon the Turtle will fly to Plymouth, England, where the NC-4 terminated its crossing.

The crew of the Turtle included Lieut. Wilbur Y. Morton, copilot, Victoria, Va., and Richard A. Schug, machinist, Richmond Hill, Va.

Wage-Hour Compromise Is Weighed

Plan to Extend It To New Industries May Be Dropped to Get 75c Minimum

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Badly bruised in its unsuccessful House effort to repeal the Taft-Hartley management-labor relations act, the Administration is preparing to back down on its move to change the Nation's wage-and-hour law.

Administration leaders in the House, it was learned yesterday, are planning to discard amendments extending the minimum wage-maximum hour legislation to new industries.

The new bill would be virtually limited to raising the present 40-cents-an-hour pay minimum to 75 cents.

But even this stripped measure will run into heavy opposition from the GOP-Dixie Democrat coalition, which blocked repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act in the House last week.

Some Prefer Step Up

Some Southern Democrats—even among those who loyally supported the Administration on the Taft-Hartley issue—oppose boosting the pay minimum from 40 to 75 cents in one jump. They would prefer a step up of the minimum starting with 55 or 60 cents an hour and rising on a yearly basis to 65, 70 and 75 cents.

The Republicans, supported by some Southern Democrats, will seek to tie the minimum wage to the cost of living, starting with a 65 cents an hour base in 1949. Next year, on January 10, the minimum would be raised or lowered, depending on the rise or fall of the cost of living index compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

In the Senate, Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) has come up with a new slant on gearing the minimum wage to economic conditions. Taft would change the minimum wage according to the fluctuations of wages generally, perhaps fixing the minimum wage at 60 per cent of the average hourly wage of industry.

While the Senate Labor Committee has yet to act, the House Labor Committee many weeks ago reported out an Administration-and-labor-indorsed bill to amend the Federal wage and hour law.

Five to Six Million Added

The present law covers 22,600,000 workers under the 40-cents an hour minimum wage, and 20 million under the 40-hour week. The committee's bill, as reported out, would add five million employes under the minimum wage, 5,500,000 under the 40-hour week.

It is estimated by the Labor Department that about 1,500,000 of the 22,600,000 employes now covered by the 40-cent minimum are paid less than 75 cents an hour, chiefly in the lumber, tobacco, leather, apparel, furniture, food products, wholesale trade, and communication industries.

Ford Rejects Mediation of 4-Day Strike

Detroit, May 8 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. today rejected offers of mediation in the four-day strike of 65,000 workers.

John S. Bugas, vice president in charge of industrial relations, said the union contract provides for arbitration in such disputes.

Therefore, he said, the union's charge of a speed-up at two plants should be processed by that means.

Mayor Orville L. Hubbard of Dearborn, where Ford's Rouge plant is situated, invited both parties to a meeting Thursday.

Shortly afterwards, Acting Mayor George Edwards of Detroit offered the services of the city's labor-management-citizens committee.

The CIO United Auto Workers said they were willing to accept Hubbard's proposal.

"This is a company-union dispute," Bugas said. "There is no issue in the current strike which cannot be quickly, promptly and peaceably handled by established procedure.

"Therefore, we see no need to turn the matter over to other individuals or groups outside the contract machinery."

There was no indication that the

Reds Report Fall of Kashing, Long Advances on Main Front

Shanghai, May 8 (AP).—The Peiping Red radio announced tonight the capture of Kashing, 62 miles by rail southwest of Shanghai, and credited Communist armies with long advances on the main front 150 to 200 miles farther southwest.

The Shanghai Nationalist garrison acknowledged it had no communication with Kashing and now was defending Kashan, 10 miles nearer Shanghai.

The Communist broadcast as heard in Shanghai also reported capture of a string of towns west of the railway that leads 59 miles southwest from Kashing to Red-held Hangchow.

The Red announcer said troops from newly captured Chuhsien, and Kiangshan, 125 and 145 miles southwest of Hangchow, were marching to the east to join forces that had taken Hangchow and crossed the Tsien Tang River southeast of Hangchow.

(Just before the Reds crossed the Yangtze River April 20, Nationalist sources had described the Tsien Tang as the government's chosen line of defense. Evidently this line has been eliminated, if it ever was set up.)

The Communists also reported they had taken a number of towns in what is now their rear area south of the Yangtze. These included Poyang, on the east shore of the big Poyang Lake—a major obstacle bypassed in their southward advance.

(Acting President Li Tsung-jen arrived in Canton today and resumed national leadership, promptly proferring a semblance of an olive branch to the fighting Reds.

(It is still not too late to end the civil war, he announced in a public statement generally conciliatory in tone. "But if the Reds persist in advancing southward, I must lead the government in stubborn resistance," he concluded.

(Li had been in Kweilin, his South China home, since his earlier peace moves in Nanking collapsed. A spokesman declined to say whether the Acting President might try further negotiations.)

The Shanghai garrison credited the Nationalist air force with "another brilliant achievement" in bombings in the triangle bounded by Kashing, Wusih and Taichang. Wusih is 75 miles west of Shanghai and Taichang is 30 miles northwest.

The communique said the bombers killed or wounded almost half of eight Red regiments (possibly 4000 men) near Taichang, and another 2000 west of Kashing. It said they also sank more than 100 Red boats in the Grand Canal near Wusih.

The Red radio said nothing of any air operations; nor did it mention the offensive aimed at Tsingtao. U. S. naval units are anchored off Tsingtao, strategic port 350 miles north of Shanghai. The Reds announced Saturday the capture of a town 33 miles north of Tsingtao.

Reds Add 50 Air Stations To Gag West

New York, May 8 (NYHT).—Wavelength jamming transmitters deployed by the Soviet Union against round-the-clock news programs of the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp. succeeded today in scrambling all but 12 per cent of the offerings from the West.

Monitoring reports compiled in London and cabled to the State Department here estimated the Russians were completely obliterating 53 per cent of all programs and seriously interfering with 35 per cent.

An estimated 25 per cent were clearly audible Saturday when the day-and-night effort began.

To put this crimp in the mass transmission methods adopted by the Voice and BBC, the Russians turned on another 50 jamming stations today. This gave them a total of 150 stations howling.

Mrs. Johnson to Have Mayo Checkup Today

Rochester, Minn., May 8 (AP).—Mrs. Louis A. Johnson, wife of Secretary of Defense Johnson, arrived in Rochester by plane late today to enter the Mayo Clinic. The Defense Secretary accompanied her.

A clinic spokesman said Mrs. Johnson will register Monday for a "routine checkup."

The Secretary and Mrs. Johnson made the trip from Washington in an Army Air Force plane.

Equal Mark Plan Studied In Germany

Berlin, May 8 (AP).—American and German circles discussed today the possibility that the Big Four may resolve Germany's currency dilemma by allowing both East and West marks to circulate throughout the country.

Under such a scheme German buyers and sellers would place the true value on each kind of currency by their willingness to trade in it.

If a united Germany is achieved in the Big Four negotiations, which open in Paris May 23, then an all-German government could decide which money to use. This would give both Russia and the Western occupation powers an "out."

American military government officials described such an arrangement as a possibility. Some German sources concurred.

The money problem may cause more talk than any other technical issue before the Paris meeting.

The West mark was introduced in Berlin by the Western Allies last June—three days ahead of the appearance of the East mark. A few hours after the battle of the currencies started, the Russians imposed their blockade on western Berlin because of what they de-

Bevin Visions Peace Lasting For 200 Years

Berlin, May 8 (NYHT)—A peace that could last 200 years is within the grasp of European statesmen, British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin told a press conference here today.

"We shall be failures," he added, "if we don't do it."

Bevin is in Berlin to see the airlift in operation and to prepare the ground for his participation in the forthcoming Council of Foreign Ministers.

His hopes for that meeting, he indicated strongly, go far beyond the matter of a German settlement. Each time he discussed the Paris meeting he soon began to speak in terms of a general settlement for all Europe, of which the German question will be only a part.

"We have to reach a settlement this time," he said, "of a character that will have the effect of settling all Europe along the right line. You have had Napoleon, the Kaiser and Hitler, all talking about the unity of Europe and trying to bring it about by force. But people have got to grow together. You have to create the conditions under which they can come together.

"I want to get Europe settled for a couple of hundred years," he continued. "I don't think it is beyond the realm of possibility, but it will take a lot of time, a lot of patience, a lot of work.

Somewhat cryptically, he warned the press that not all the decisions made at Paris would win the support of the public or of the press. As a Foreign Minister, he said, it was necessary for him to think in terms of 50 years ahead, and not of tomorrow.

"Sometimes popular decisions may be wrong," he said, "I want to ask all you good press people to keep a balanced judgment."

Reds Beaten, Constitution For Germany Is Adopted

Bonn Assembly Votes Measure on Fourth VE-Day Anniversary; Elections to Follow

Bonn, Germany, May 8.(AP). The Constituent Assembly tonight approved a democratic constitution for a west German republic — opposed by both the Soviet Union and German Communists.

The 53-to-12-vote approval came at 11:55 p. m. German time (4:55 EST), only five minutes before close of the fourth anniversary of the Allied victory in Europe.

Immediately after the constitution was adopted, copies were rushed to the Western military governors for their approval. It took eight months of lengthy deliberations by the assembly to put the charter in the governors' hands.

Bavarians Dissent

Dissenting votes were cast by the assembly's only two Communist delegates and a group of right-wing delegates from the United States zone state of Bavaria. The Bavarians said the new constitution does not grant enough states' rights.

The Communists and Russia have long opposed a separate west German state, favoring instead a single German government. One of the Soviet conditions for lifting the Berlin blockade next Thursday was the calling of the four-power Council of Foreign Ministers' meeting in Paris May 23 to discuss an all-German settlement.

Although the constitution was approved on second reading Friday by a large majority, the final reading was postponed until today because German leaders wanted May 8 to have some significance in German history beside the Nazis' defeat.

Oratory Cut Short

The final vote was preceded by lengthy oratory by the assembly's leading delegates. They were cut short by Dr. Konrad Adenauer, assembly president, who appealed to them to sacrifice their desire to make speeches so that a pre-midnight vote could take place.

The constitution calls for a federal republic along democratic lines to govern 46 million inhabitants of the American, British and French zones until a government for all Germany is formed.

Adoption of the constitution paved the way for general elections in the three western zones for members of parliament. The target date for the new government to take office is July 15.

The Soviet zone is excluded under the present setup, but the door was left open to the eastern area should the Russians agree at the Council of Foreign Ministers in Paris to guarantee free elections in the Soviet zone.

The convention chose the flag

Italians Demand Ouster of Scelba In Bandit War

Rome, May 8 (AP).—Italy's pro-Communist Socialists demanded the scalp of Interior Minister Mario Scelba today because he has not been able to catch up with Sicily's defiant bandit king, Salvatore Giuliano.

They introduced a motion in the Senate urging that Scelba, a member of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, be fired for incompetence. The government promised to fix a date for debate.

Giuliano, who has been referred to as a Robin Hood type bandit, has operated ever since the war in the mountains west of Palermo. The Ministry of Interior, which controls the police, has maintained heavy caribinieri forces in the region for a year trying to catch him.

Not long ago, Giuliano contemptuously declared war on the government.

In 1947, the government put a price of $13,000 on his head.

Jap Population Grows

Tokyo, May 8 (U.P.)—The population of Japan increased 1,700,000 during 1948, setting a new record as the birth rate continued high and the death rate dropped to a history-making low, the Welfare Ministry announced.

The ministry calculated the year's birth rate as 33.78 per thousand population, and the death rate at 11.96 per thousand.

To Foster Unification

Blandy Says Armed Services Ought to Exchange Officers

Aboard the Carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt, May 8 (U.P.)—Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, Atlantic Fleet commander, today urged trading of officers among the armed forces as a means of promoting unification and more intelligent war planning.

The chief of the 1946 Bikini atom bomb tests explained the proposal in an interview aboard this carrier after a demonstration of Navy striking power for Congressmen and reporters. He said perhaps 100 officers at a time could be assigned to a service other than their own for one or two-year periods.

After a period of years, a top command organization would be built up whose officers, whether of the Air Force, Army or Navy, would be familiar with all the services, Blandy said.

Today, for example, very few Air Force officers are familiar with the capabilities of naval aviation, he asserted.

Observers had an implied demonstration of this possibility when Navy jet fighters were catapulted off the 45,000-ton carrier's deck to climb to 40,000 feet in seven minutes. These planes, McDonnell F2H Banshees, were said to be able to intercept a bomber attack at altitudes up to 8 miles.

If actual war games were held with the Air Force and the Banshees proved themselves, it would weaken the Air Force's claim that its B-36 superbombers are almost impossible targets for interceptors above 40,000 feet. Air Force statements have been based on tests of the B-36 against Air Force fighters which are said to require 23 minutes to climb to 40,000 feet and then not to be able to do tight maneuvers.

Woman Ambassador to U. S. From India Has Long String of Firsts to Her Credit

The first woman ambassador to the United States has an impressive number of firsts to her credit.

Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, in 1947, was India's first ambassador, man or woman, to the Soviet Union. The previous year she was the first and only woman to lead a national delgation to the United Nations General Assembly. At home, in 1937-39, she was India's first provincial woman minister, holding the portfolio of Local Self-Government and Public Health.

MRS. PANDIT,
. . ambassador to U. S.

The sister of Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, she has more than justified, in 30 years of public service, her early fight against traditional barriers to participation of women in Indian public life. And while performing these useful services, showing the way to her countrywomen, enduring three prison terms for her political views and writing three books, she has been eminently successful as a wife and mother.

"Portrait" Is Painted

Her beauty, her composure and her persuasive and effective manner of speaking have inevitably attracted the same attention as have her humanitarianism and her political leadership. Author Pearl Buck once wrote of her:

"Vijaya Lakshmi is so beautiful that one must first become accustomed to the fact. Silvering wavy hair, great dark eyes lively with intelligence, a creamy skin, fine Aryan features, exquisite hands, small bare feet thrust into gold sandals, saris that mold her slender figure into statuesque lines—this is her physical portrait.

"Then one becomes aware of her voice, soft, clear, resonant, speaking a pure English. When one listens, one becomes aware next of what is being said—something very firm, gay, witty, fearless—something worth listening to, whether one agrees with it or not."

A reporter who observed her at the United Nations General Assembly in 1946, wrote:

"It is a joy to listen to her, to watch her snatch points from her platform opponents in debate. Seeing her in action, one understands better the spirit that has upheld both herself and her distinguished brother.

Born August 18, 1900, into a wealthy Brahman family at Allahabad, Swarup Kumari (as she was named) grew to young womanhood with every advantage money and position could give her. When she was 5, she was taken to England, where a governess was engaged to return to India to lay the foundation for her education. In 1921, she was married to a young lawyer, Ranjit Pandit, and in accordance with Indian custom, was adopted into her husband's clan and renamed.

Mohandas Ghandi had launched his "civil disobedience" campaign two years before and the Nehru family was drawn one by one into the Nationalist movement. In 1932, when she was the mother of three daughters, the youngest only 3, Mrs. Pandit was first imprisoned for taking part in Indian Independence Way. Twice again she was jailed for defiance of British orders, her husband and eldest daughter enduring imprisonment with her at different times. Her husband, suffering from the effects of his last imprisonment, died in 1944.

Mrs. Pandit's three daughters all were educated in the United States, the two eldest at Wellesley College under the Mayling Soong (Mme. Chiang Kai-shek) Foundation. She herself first came to this country in 1944 as a delegate to the Pacific Relations Conference at Hot Springs, Va. At the San Francisco conference of the U. N. in 1945, she presented the case of India unofficially. As head of the Indian delegate to the 1946 U. N. General Assembly, Mrs. Pandit succeeded in securing a vote of censure for the racial policies of South Africa.

She is author of "So I Became a Minister," "My Prison Days" and her autobiography, "Sunlight and Shadows."

Acheson to See Senators Today On Big 4 Talks

By the United Press

Secretary of State Acheson and Roving Ambassador Philip C. Jessup may give Senate foreign policy leaders a preview today of the position the United States expects to take at the forthcoming four-power talks on Germany.

They are scheduled to meet privately with Chairman Connally, (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Vandenberg, chief Republican foreign affairs spokesman in the Senate.

Topping their so-called "position list" is advance rejection of any Russian proposal that all occupation troops be withdrawn from Germany. The Senators will be advised that the United States is committed to a long-range occupation policy and will stand pat on it, regardless of Russian "offers."

The Senators, in turn, are expected to urge that Acheson and Jessup continue the "patient but firm" policy toward Moscow which they helped establish as advisers to former Secretaries of State James F. Byrnes and George C. Marshall at previous Four-Power meetings.

Indonesian Parley Asked

Batavia, May 8 (AP).—Indonesian leaders representing non-Republican states today asked for a conference with the Republicans before any Dutch-Republican talks at The Hague.

A Dutch-Indonesian compromise to settle the Indonesian problem was announced yesterday. Among its terms were reestablishment of the Republican government in its capital at Jogjakarta and a conference at The Hague to speed up the "unconditional transfer of real and complete sovereignty" to a United States of Indonesia.

A statement issued by the Assembly for Federal Consultations, composed of executives of what were originally Dutch-sponsored states and territories outside the Republic, said the future federal government "is purely of Indonesian concern." It added that formation of the federal government "must be dealt with in inter-Indonesian discussions preceding the round table conference" at The Hague.

VE-Day Noted Hopefully by West Europe

London, May 8 (AP).—Western Europe observed the fourth anniversary of VE-Day today, a little more hopeful that a stable peace may be established at last on the Continent.

In Russia and other eastern European countries the anniversary will be observed Monday in commemoration of Prime Minister Stalin's announcement to the Slav world that the fighting in Europe was over.

Eastern editorials and speeches today contained much of the usual vilification of Western countries, but the emphasis of many declarations was on work.

In France the anniversary coincided with Joan of Arc Day. President Vincent Auriol watched two Paris parades.

Britain paid little attention to the anniversary. One ceremony took place in Christ Church, in London's Chelsea district, where tablets bearing the names of persons killed in the blitz were unveiled.

Former inmates of Nazi concentration camps paraded to a cemetery in Hamburg to lay wreaths. In the procession were many flags, including the black, red and gold of the Weimar Republic and the flag of Israel, said to have been displayed publicly in Germany for the first time.

The Russians unveiled a Soviet war memorial in Berlin. It was made of marble from Adolf Hitler's Chancellery.

Ambassador Denies Argentina Seeks Loan

Buenos Aires, May 8 (U.P.).—Jeronimo Remorino, Argentine Ambassador to the United States, left by air for Washington today after denying reports that he would seek a loan for Argentina.

He had spent three weeks here, conferring with Government leaders.

The Ambassador disclaimed knowledge of reported Argentine plans to seek a 10 million dollar loan from the Export-Import Bank to start construction of the projected 140 million dollar steel plant at Zarate.

Rebels Mass Along Border, Greeks Report

Athens, May 8 (U.P.) — "Strong concentrations" of guerillas are massing on the Albanian border in preparation for a possible summer drive into Greece, the Greek general staff announced.

Unofficial sources estimated more than 10,000 rebels were massed along the border, near the "natural entry points" used by the Italians for their World War II attack on Greece.

The general staff communique said reconnaissance planes had sighted guerillas piling up large amounts of ammunition and other supplies near two Albanian border towns.

About 4000 of the guerillas defeated in the Grammos Mountain area retreated into Albania, the communique said.

Fire in England Fatal To Dowager Countess

The countess' housekeeper was burned seriously, but six other occupants of the house escaped injury.

scribed as "technical difficulties."

The Russians steadfastly have outlawed the West mark in their occupation territory, confiscating it whenever found in German possession. Two months ago the Western Allies made the West mark the sole legal tender in western Berlin.

It is not so simple now for either the East or the West to sit down and say: "All right, we'll take your mark."

The Americans, for example, have possibly three billion dollars at stake, which they have contributed to western Germany's relief and rehabilitation. Those billions helped make the West mark a valuable currency. There was no gold, as such, but plenty of hard dollars back of it.

Value Increased

The dollars assured western German industries of necessary foreign raw materials to expand production. They also stimulated agriculture and helped fill the workers' dinner pails. As production soared, the West mark's value increased.

The West mark was pegged at 30 cents, an admittedly artificial level. For a long time the Swiss free market rated it at about 6 cents. Now the Swiss value it at 16 cents, and the Germans themselves think it is worth anywhere from 16 to 25 cents.

The Western powers are not likely to scrap this solid money.

The Russian position is equally difficult to compromise but for different reasons. The Russians have built what financial name they possess in Germany on their East mark. They have propagandized it, but they have not put solid money into the Soviet zone to back it up. In four years the Russians have removed possibly 10 billion dollars' worth of equipment and goods from that zone.

Curiously enough the East mark does have a value, even though the Russians may print it at will on their Leipzig press. Just before the agreement to end the blockades was announced last week one West mark would buy four East marks. As soon as the four powers disclosed they were getting together again, the West mark bought only 3.25 East marks.

of the old democratic Weimar Republic which fell in 1933 before Hitler and the Swastika. The Weimar flag has black, red and gold horizontal stripes.

Choice of a capital was delayed until later in the week. The chief contestants are Frankfurt and Bonn.

The assembly went on record favoring ratification of the constitution by state legislatures of the three western zones rather than by popular plebiscite. The delegates hotly debated this issue with the Communists, who argued for a referendum.

Final decision on ratification rests with the three military governors.

Death Pnalty Abolished

Like the flag, the Bonn constitution represents an effort to get Germany back to the family of democratic nations, to bury the memory of the Nazis.

The new constitution abolishes the death penalty entirely. It discards militarism by making no provision for raising an army, and by giving no one, neither President nor parliament, power to declare war.

It makes the plotting of aggressive war a punishable offense, provides for the surrender of sovereignty to a United States of Europe, when and if, and embodies an elaborate "bill of rights" guaranteeing freedom of press, religion, assembly, and equality of all regardless of race, religion, language, sex and political opinions. Censorship is forbidden.

Modeled after the United States and British systems, it creates a federal government with specific powers, with other powers reserved to the states. A figurehead president is chief of state with administrative powers handled by a chancellor chosen by a Bund, or parliament. Parliament is divied into a Bundestag and Bundsrat, the lower and upper houses. An independent judiciary is provided.

The 54-year-old Stevens was described by Whittaker Chambers and other witnesses before the House Un-American Activities Committee as a top figure in the Communist underground. Chambers referred to him as the underground chief.

Truman Lays His Health to Staying Busy

President Truman yesterday attributed his good health on his 65th birthday to the fact that he has had to work hard all his life and hasn't had time to get into mischief.

The President made the remark about his health to the Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., as the two were walking out of the church after the early morning service.

Dr. Pruden, in wishing the President a happy birthday, had said that he only hoped that when he reached his 65th birthday he would be as full of vim and vigor as Mr. Truman.

The President rode the eight blocks from Blair House to the church and back in a White House car. Later, he spent the day quietly at home with Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Margaret.

Mother's Day flowers which decorated the front of the church were placed there by members of the congregation in memory of the President's mother, Mrs. Martha Ellen Truman, who died at 94 in July, 1947.

The church program carried birthday congratulations to Mr. Truman and the a capella choir of Parkersburg (W. Va.) High School, which sang at the service, dedicated its last number to the President.

In addition to the President's birthday and Mother's Day, Sunday was the fourth anniversary of the end of the war in Europe.

Dr. Pruden spoke on "The Four Families" in his sermon. These, Dr. Pruden said, were the Nazareth family, to which Jesus belonged, the human family, from which all of us come; the spiritual family, which is the Christian church, and the world family, comprising the human race.

"While we are spiritual brothers of all those who come to God through Christ, we are also natural brothers of all mankind, and the success we have in bringing into a spiritual brotherhood the nations of the earth will depend on the extent to which we demonstrate our sense of natural brotherhood and all that implies," Dr. Pruden said.

"It is not enough to stop Russia or defeat communism or to outmaneuver our ideological opponents," he declared. "We must go beyond all of this and share with all mankind that knowledge of God which has come to us through Christ and which ultimately creates that spiritual family in which wars will be impossible and we can create a just and lasting peace."

By the United Press

Senator McGrath (D., R. I.), chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said bluntly yesterday, "a Dixiecrat has no future in the Democratic party."

He made the statement during a discussion of how the National Committee will carry out President Truman's policy of denying patronage to Democrats in Congress who vote against Administration bills included in the party platform.

While there was some disagreement the President and McGrath on their official statements of patronage policy, they seem agreed on how it would apply to bolting Southerners.

Votes Made a Test

McGrath said at first that votes in Congress would not be a test of party loyalty, but Mr. Truman said they would.

McGrath accepted the President's dictum with an acknowledgement that "he makes the appointments." The party chairman said it was his idea, however, that jobs also be awarded on a basis of "the appointee's record and an estimate of his future value to the party."

There is no "future value to the party," he said, in a Democrat who won't go along with the party platform. On that basis, he added with emphasis: "A Dixiecrat has no future in the Democratic Party."

Kefauver Speaks

Meanwhile, Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said over radio station WPIK that there is "small place in the growing Democracy of the Southland for men who would turn back the clock."

"I don't think there is a place for the Dixiecrat Party in the Nation," he said. "I think from a purely Southern viewpoint that we in the South will be much better off in trying to strengthen the Democratic Party to give proper representation to the Southern States."

McGrath sees the Democratic Party as the instrument for progressive and liberal legislation. He doesn't see how it can continue to win national elections on a liberal platform unless it enacts progressive laws.

Pact Hearings To Be Speeded, Connally Says

By The Associated Press

Senator Connally (D., Tex.) moved yesterday to finish hearings on the North Atlantic security treaty this week in an effort to speed Senate action on it.

Connally told reporters the Senate Foreign Relations committee, which he heads, probably will ask witnesses to confine themselves to brief oral testimony and file written statements.

"I would like to get through with hearings this week and get the treaty up in the Senate as soon as possible," the Senator said.

He indicated, however, that there will be no limitation on today's witnesses, headed by Robert Patterson, former Secretary of War.

Connally said that as far as he is concerned, he hopes the 12-nation treaty can be acted upon before Congress takes up the question of furnishing arms to nations which joined the United States in signing the pact.

"We will be in a stronger position on the arms question if the treaty is ratified," he commented.

Report Says U. S. Aid Can Liberalize Spain

By the United Press

The Foreign Policy Association said yesterday that Spain's need for American economic aid can be used to bring genuine liberalization of the Franco regime.

Olive Holmes, a research associate who recently visited Spain and Portugal, argued that the western democracies will be throwing away their "enormous bargaining power" if they extend aid to Spain and Portugal without insisting they remedy some of the dictatorial features of their governments.

Job Changing Leveling Off From Postwar Peak, U. S. Says

By the United Press

The Nation's labor force seems to be stabilizing after the hectic postwar round of job changing although factory layoffs are at a 10-year high, the Labor Department reported yesterday.

It said only 4.6 workers out of every 100 either quit their jobs or were discharged in March. The separation rate now has remained almost steady for 15 months.

While the factory turnover of 2.8 workers per 100 was lower than the average for all workers, it still was the highest since 1939. During the war years, this turnover averaged less than one employe per 100 per month.

The overall job separation rate remained relatively high all through the flush war years and the immediate postwar period when wages were high and jobs easy to find.

The factory job turnover rate remained less than two employes per 100, however, until last December, when the rate began to pick up. It still has not leveled off.

Trend Reflects Furloughs

The department said the trend reflects furloughs since December in the railroad, textile, rayon, steel, iron castings, non-ferrous metals and rubber goods industries. Some of these workers have been recalled during the spring pickup in employment.

The hiring rate also has been lagging. In March, only 2.8 workers were hired per 100 employes. That was the lowest since December and a naverage of 1.2 workers less than in March, 1948.

The Federal Works Agency, meanwhile, said today there isn't a big enough backlog of Federal projects to meet a Nation-wide unemployment emergency.

The agency, in its monthly publication, estimated that completely blueprinted local, State and Federal construction projects now add up to about $4,500,000,000. But it said many times that sum alone could be spent on highways, school construction, sewers and waterworks without exhausting present construction needs.

by which the Labor-Federal Security bill was sent back to committee for a 5 per cent over-all cut.

GOP forces succeeded in bringing about the cut in the Labor-Federal Security bill, and have served notice that they will try the same cut on the Treasury-Postoffice bill and on all other appropriation measures.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) has warned that he will try to cut ECA funds by 10 per cent when that appropriation measure reaches the Senate floor.

The House, this session, has set an exceptionally speedy record in considering and passing appropriation bills, but the Senate has a tremendous backlog still to be considered.

Besides the housing, census and Federal employe travel bill, the House this week is scheduled to consider a measure to repay Switzerland for war damages, Commodity Credit legislation, and State Department organization and administration.

Leaders May Hold Up Controversial Bills

By The Associated Press

The Truman Administration may decide to let some of its controversial bills wait in Congress until next year, it was indicated yesterday.

Democratic leaders in interviews said the chances now seem slim for passage in this session of measures to broaden the base of social security benefits, and to put into effect a proposed universal medical care program.

There also is extreme doubt that the new farm subsidy payment plan offered by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan can be pushed to a test vote before Congress adjourns, possibly in early August.

Slump Feared As 'Economy' Drive Result

By The Associated Press

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said yesterday there is danger that the current "economy drive" in Congress might touch off a "serious depression."

O'Mahoney is chairman of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee and he took sharp issue with recent proposals by Senator Byrd (D., Va.) and Republican congressional leaders.

"I'm fearful that a lot of these demands for severe cutbacks in Federal Government programs and employment are aimed at results of the present economic situation rather than the causes," he told a reporter.

If the Government starts trimming its spending too deeply and firing too many employes, O'Mahoney said that instead of softening or lessening a recession "we may bring on a real depression."

"I think the Veterans Administration made a mistake in suddenly firing 8000 Government employes last week," he said. "After all, the Government often sets a pattern for business in this country. Certainly those employes were not wasting their time."

O'Mahoney also questioned the weekend proposals of Senator Byrd for a "drastic reduction in spending" by the Federal Government with a cutback of four billion dollars or more in President Truman's budget for the next year.

O'Mahoney said the Federal Government cannot drastically cut back its spending and employment suddenly without disastrous results.

"We must not forget that our present huge debt came from borrowing on our future to win a war," he said.

In the years ahead, O'Mahoney said, the Nation's economy must operate on a level of high incomes and full employment to meet these debt burdens and gradually pay off that debt.

Oil-Coal Project Dedicated

Louisiana, Mo., May 8 (AP).—A method of saving this country from an oil shortage for generations to come—by making oil out of coal—was dedicated in a formal ceremony here today.

The Federal Government is perfecting the process in two big demonstration plants here. Julius A. Krug, Secretary of the Interior, came from Washington to dedicate them.

In his speech he called on private industry to get busy on a plant of its own without delay.

Some of the visiting industrialists, especially oil men, commented adversely on the project, but in view of their position as guests would not be quoted.

They raised doubts as to whether any serious shortage of petroleum is likely for many years to come, and said they would rather see the Federal Government doing broader and more basic scientific research on synthetic fuel.

As for the supply of coal, Krug said:

"Does the United States have sufficient coal to contemplate the large requirements of a synthetic fuels industry? Fortunately, the answer is yes. This country has almost half the world's total known coal reserves."

The U. S. Bureau of Mines has found that gasoline can be made from coal for 12 to 15 cents a gallon, not counting the value of by-products. Counting the by-products, the figure is given 8 to 12 cents a gallon.

Businessmen Split On Social Security

By the United Press

Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) said yesterday that a survey of 6000 firms shows businessmen split nearly 50-50 on the question of extending social security coverage to persons now excluded.

The same group, he said, "voted heavily against the proposal that a system of compulsory health insurance should be added to the present social security setup."

He said his personal survey showed that 47 per cent of those replying to his questionnaire favor extension of old age and unemployment benefits to those not now covered, while 53 per cent were against.

Ninety-four per cent opposed compulsory health insurance, he added.

Butler said he polled businessmen because these questions are pending before the Senate Finance Committee, of which he is a member.

He said he also got this reaction to his questionnaire:

1. The normal income tax on corporations should be 30 per cent and on individuals 38 per cent—rates he describes as "well below" present maximums in both categories.

2. In recommending a depreciation or replacement formula, 20 per cent were for straight-line cost methods; 35 per cent for permitting owners to decide, and 41 per cent for the present formula.

3. When asked which taxes are most objectionable and should be repealed first, 65 per cent chose the transportation tax, 21 per cent the communications tax, and 11 per cent said all "nuisance" taxes.

union would change its previous stand against arbitration.

After the strike began last Thursday, UAW President Walter Reuther said the issue could not be settled by an arbitrator. He said it had to be worked out by the union and company.

Reuther, however, expressed willingness to meet "at any time and at any place for the purpose of effecting a fair and equitable settlement."

As the strike dragged on, its reverberations began to spiral out from the Detroit area to other parts of the Nation. Ford has 49 plants around the world, employing 106,000 production workers.

8000 Face Layoffs Today

The company said 8000 men would be laid off in other sections Monday. Facing shutdowns are plants in St. Louis, Metuchen, N. J., Los Angeles, Minneapolis-St. Paul and Iron Mountain, Mich.

Also feeling the weight of the strike were some of Ford's 3500 parts suppliers.

A hint came from Bugas that Ford might not consider opening of spring contract negotiations until the present strike is settled.

A letter from the union asking start of bargaining May 16 lay unanswered on Bugas' desk. It was mailed last Monday.

Asked about the company's plans in this matter, Bugas said:

"Well, the union's letter has not been answered."

Yesterday, picket lines around the two struck plants—that at River Rouge and the Lincoln-Mercury plant—dwindled to 1700. About 5000 UAW members were on the lines the first two days.

Thomas Thompson, president of Rouge Local 600, said strikers would be cared for "regardless of the length of the strike."

He said $3000 was being spent daily at soup kitchens, and "nobody will starve."

Strikers were required to report to picket captains. They faced fines of $2 for ignoring instructions to do picket duty.

Elsewhere in the industry, the picture was brighter.

Hudson Motor Car Co. announced it had instructed 25,000 idle workers to report back Monday. Hudson shut down last week due to a shortage of brakes normally supplied by the strikebound Bendix plant at South Bend, Ind. Hudson is now making its own brakes.

Briggs Manufacturing Co. said it was calling back 16,800 workers sent home late Friday after a walkout of 750 in the door department.

Chrysler Corp. will resume operations at its Plymouth plant Monday. Some 5800 were made idle there Friday because of a shortage of bodies supplied by Briggs.

New York Transit Strike Called Off

New York, May 8 (AP).—A strike threatened Monday by 4000 employes of the Third Avenue transit system was called off today. The system—the city's largest bus and trolley company—hauls about two million riders daily.

The union—local 100 of the CIO Transport Workers Union—agreed to call off the strike after the company said it would reinstate two discharged bus drivers with full back pay as demanded by the union.

Inconsistency

"A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds, adored by little statesmen, and philosophers and divines." This famous dictum of the Sage of Concord, Ralph Waldo Emerson, came to mind when we read that President Truman had urged members of Congress to do what they think to be right—that is, vote according to their convictions—on the basis of the facts at hand. To those who regard inconsistency as a mark of greatness that advice should increase the President's stature as a statesman, for only a few days ago he threatened to punish members of Congress who voted against Administration bills by depriving them of patronage. Since that threat still stands, it follows that the President's brand of inconsistency takes the form of simultaneously indorsing irreconcilable codes of conduct.

We feel sure that Emerson would not applaud this kind of inconsistency, which is merely a way of currying favor by expressing noble sentiments, while clinging to practices in conflict with such views. At any rate, the President's little homily will not allay the alarm of members of Congress, whose views of what is right differ from his own and who have been forewarned of reprisals if they depart from the party line.

Hope Of The East

Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, who arrives today to take over the Indian Embassy, is the first woman to serve as an Ambassador in Washington. But this is merely a personal reason for the special welcome that awaits her here. She comes from a state, which, if it can surmount enormous issues at home and on its borders, appears destined for an important role in the world of affairs. The omens are favorable, in part because of the ability and sense of leadership of Premier Nehru, Mrs. Pandit's brother. India is on a pedestal to the rest of the Asian and African world still emerging from the cocoon of colonialism. The hold of western power over these peoples is almost gone. They are looking for new symbols and new associations. India, under Nehru, can be a pillar of stability and strength to all the colonial peoples. Indeed, it is already the pivot of their hopes and of their embryonic regional organizations. Here, and not in Russia, is the real bridge between east and west. We wish Mrs. Pandit a happy and successful embassy.

Victory On Education

Many persons and organizations have helped to shape the Federal-aid-to-education bill that passed the Senate last week. In its final form the bill had bipartisan sponsorship and overwhelming support in the Senate. Special credit for its enactment goes, however, to Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare. Since he came to the Senate from a professorship in the University of Utah, Mr. Thomas' influence in this field was doubtless felt long before he got into public life. Certainly he has been persistent since he has been in Washington. Twelve years ago he was one of the chief sponsors of a bill that had been worked out by the National Education Association following the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Education. Since then successive bills on the subject have borne his name, and he has never lost an opportunity to promote the cause.

Two major obstacles stood in the way of the policy the Senate has now adopted. One was the fear that Federal grants to the educational systems of the States might lead to Federal dictation as to what should be taught in our schools. The other was the feeling that, since education is a local function, the States can finance it amply without aid from the Federal Treasury. In his quiet way, Senator Thomas has probably done more than any one man to expose the fallacy of those beliefs.

It is now well established that Congress can aid the States in various activities in which the people as a whole are interested without plunging those activities into national politics. The insistent demand of the people that their schools be free from governmental pressures and propaganda is probably enough to insure them against Federal control following in the wake of Federal aid. Over a long period of years Senator Thomas also repeatedly emphasized the inexcusable disparity of educational opportunities between the poor and the wealthy States. The spectacle of an educational system operating on only $24 a year per pupil before the war in Mississippi and other systems spending more than five times that amount in some of the States came to haunt the Senate and everyone else who thought about it. We have a national economy that tends to concentrate income in certain favored areas and compartmentalized educational systems that lay a terrible handicap upon youngsters who happen to be born in the wrong place. Most men who honestly face this fact quickly lose their prejudices against Federal aid to education. By keeping up a drumfire of facts about the inequalities of our educational system and by improving his own bills on the subject from year to year, Senator Thomas has won a notable victory and we think he is entitled to special congratulations.

European Council

The cynics will be wrong, as usual, if they scoff at the newly signed charter of the Council of Europe. For this is another step, an imaginative and important step, on the road to a united Europe. It symbolizes the existence of a European spirit. It suggests a growing willingness on the part of the Europeans to get rid of the anarchic nationalism that has cursed their continent for more than 500 years. Perfectionists may grieve at the thought that Europe is not ready to shed its nationalism all at once. We think, on the contrary, that each forward step should be encouraged, and that this one in particular should be applauded by the American people.

In terms of its actual powers, the new council is little more than a magnificent gesture. There are to be two bodies: one a Committee of Ministers, the other a Consultative Assembly. The committee members will be responsible only to the sovereign and independent governments which appointed them. The assembly will be a debating society with powers only to discuss and to recommend. By no stretch of the imagination can the two bodies be regarded as a government of a United States of Europe or as a government of any kind. Yet the mere existence of this European organization should be a constant reminder of European interests, attitudes and ideals which transcend the limits of national frontiers.

Since Europe cannot be expected to federate overnight, it is all the more important for Europeans to get into the habit of thinking and acting in continental terms. Their very survival depends on it. When M. Marjolin, secretary general of the OEEC, was in Washington a few weeks ago, he remarked that the most valuable by-product of the Marshall Plan was that it encouraged and, indeed, compelled 16 nations to work and plan together. The 16 nations have now accustomed themselves to showing one another their economic plans and shaping their economic future as one. Through constant association rather than any specific powers of the OEEC, they are developing a European consciousness. So it will be, we hope, with the council that is to be the permanent counterpart of the OEEC in political and cultural fields.

When the Marshall Plan was new, this newspaper pleaded for a declaration of interdependence by the participating nations, in the hope that the great goal of unification might be held steadily before the eyes of the European peoples. The formation of the new Council of Europe may accomplish the same result. There was a fine imaginative touch in the decision to place the capital of the council at Strasbourg on the Rhine, where French and German cultures have met and clashed for a thousand years. There is a brave spirit behind this entire enterprise, in spite of the caution with which a few of the member governments are approaching it. The creation of this European entity may yet fulfill the dreams of farsighted Europeans through the ages.

Unfair Punishment

The punishment meted out by Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson to Gloucester County (Va.) school officials seems scarcely less deplorable than the unequal conditions they were trying to correct. Because the county's segregated schools were not equalized in compliance with an earlier court order, Judge Hutcheson assessed fines of $250 each against the superintendent and three members of the school board. To a superintendent drawing $4300 a year and businessmen paid only nominal fees for their school service, a fine of $250 is a severe blow. The net effect, instead of speeding up equalization efforts, may be to make school administration unattractive.

Whether the school officials bestirred themselves as much as they might have is a moot point, but that they did act is a matter of record. They attempted to raise funds for school improvement through a bond issue; this was turned down by a vote of 591-368. Officials then turned to the State Literary Loan Fund. Despite the depleted condition of the fund, the request for $50,000 has received top priority and the State superintendent of public instruction has expressed his belief that a second request for $50,000 also will receive favorable action.

There was more to the defeat of the bond issue than meets the eye, and it involves the turmoil over Gloucester schools that recently resulted in the ouster of the old superintendent in favor of a new man. It would be instructive to know, for example, what influences prompted the strange withdrawal of the original proposal for a $700,000 bond issue for both white and Negro schools and the substitution of a $300,000 issue for Negro schools alone. Almost certainly that move contributed to the negative vote, for it meant that white residents were asked to approve better schools for Negroes than for their own children. Unless school officials themselves deliberately participated in this maneuver, it is hard to see how they can fairly be held accountable for the action of county voters, and it is even harder to understand how Judge Hutcheson's summary decision will bring better schools to Gloucester.

"Healthy Deflation"

The Council of Economic Advisers has informed the President that the country is undergoing a "healthy deflation." But it prudently left the door open for a dignified retreat by adding that there are still "inherent" inflationary and deflationary factors that could cause trouble.

No great amount of detective skill is required to put the finger on some trouble-making factors whose unpredictable effects make business forecasting a hazardous, nerve-racking occupation. First and foremost among them is the demand for fourth-round wage increases. If the powerful labor unions that are spearheading this drive succeed in obtaining sizable wage increases, without striking, the result will be, of course, to raise the purchasing power of their employed members. However, the increased production costs of the concerns granting wage increases will tend to arrest price declines and in some cases lead to price increases in the affected areas. That sort of localized inflation would interfere with the healthy deflation that Dr. Nourse and his colleagues have in mind—that is, gradual price reductions needed to sustain sales in face of declining demands and maintain employment at high levels.

Strikes constitute another threat to healthy deflation and are one of the most unpredictable factors with which business analysts have to reckon. If the Ford strike is prolonged, it will undoubtedly entail heavy loss of wages not only for Ford employes but workers in firms producing auto parts. It will also result in loss of business by tradesmen as well as the Ford Company and supplying concerns, cut down automobile production, and work against further reductions in car prices. Similarly, if strikes were to tie up coal, steel, and other large industries, the downward trend of prices in the industries concerned would be arrested.

The country prospers only when the economy is able to provide jobs at good wages for the employable population. When prices of goods reach levels that discourage buying, industries producing those goods either have to reduce their prices or reduce the scale of their operations. Efforts to buck the deflationary trend by raising wages are self-defeating. For it means that some workers will have to be dismissed, while all workers, as consumers, will have their buying power restricted by high living costs made necessary by wage increases. Moreover, since costs do not set a limit to price declines, it is quite possible that forced and disastrously sharp drops in both prices and wages would be the ultimate result of a failure to reduce prices to levels at which effective demand equals supply, with industries operating at full capacity.

The growing imbalance between consumer demands for many kinds of goods and the supply of such goods at existing prices is a sure sign that downward price adjustments are needed to correct the price distortions of a prolonged period of inflation. So far those adjustments have been proceeding with less friction than had been feared and are beginning to be reflected in lower living costs. Orderly adjustments of this kind are the best insurance against a major depression. If they are stalled by strikes or demands for higher wages, the result may well be less work at lower wages for everybody.

Assassins Still Free

If freedom from political assassination were a condition of membership in the United Nations, the world organization would be quite a bit smaller than it is. Speaking on behalf of Israel's application in the Ad Hoc Political Committee Thursday, Mr. Aubrey Eban made a telling point on this. The representative of Egypt, he said, could confirm that political assassination occurs even in well-established states.

It would be quite unreasonable, therefore, to hold up Israel's membership in the U. N. until it produces the criminals who assassinated Count Folke Bernadotte last September. That would furnish Israel, which is eager to obtain membership in the U. N., with the temptation to turn in a false conviction. Nor does the slow progress in getting to the bottom of the crime have any direct bearing on Israel's qualifications for membership under the terms of the Charter. The two questions are wholly separate and ought to remain so.

But this view certainly does not condone the assassination, and Mr. Eban did not put forward any such condonation. He pointed out a few circumstances by way of extenuation. Police and military security forces were not well established when the murder was perpetrated; the new government was just beginning to gather the reins of authority in its own hands. Nevertheless, the fact that in the nearly eight months since Count Bernadotte was slain the Israel authorities have gotten nowhere as to apprehension of the criminals is a grave reflection on the new state. It is pertinent to remind Israel that the Bernadotte murder was a bloody and arrogant affront to the United Nations which it is perfectly right in bringing to Tel Aviv's attention.

"You Guys Order One Of These?"

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Labor Outlook

THE CROWING over President Truman's troubles with labor legislation is singularly premature. The President is certainly not going to induce the Congress to bring back the old Wagner Act days, as he rather unconvincingly says he desires. But the chances are now excellent that he will get a new labor law severely diluting the Taft-Hartley Act, and probably expunging that controversial name from the statute books. His victory will not be total, but he has good hopes of victory.

One sign was the recent defeat of the Republican-Southern Democratic coalition, and the humiliating recommitment of their just-passed Wood bill to the House Labor Committee. This means there is far more support for moderate labor legislation in the House than most observers had supposed.

What is more important still, most observers are also forgetting that the main arena of struggle will be the Senate. There is every reason why the Senate's preferences on labor legislation should eventually prevail over those of the House. The House Labor Committee, from which House conferees will be drawn, is in majority pro-labor. Thus the House participants in the future conference committee are likely to approve with alacrity any Senate actions favorable to the labor groups. And while the extremists will complain, there is not much doubt that the House as a whole will accept the resulting conference report.

THIS IS LOOKING far into the future, considering that neither House nor Senate has taken final action as yet. But the House outlook, after recommittal of the Wood bill, is for compromise. And in the Senate, a curious, complex and hard to disentangle situation has arisen which, despite all its confusions, also seems to promise an exceedingly moderate labor law.

Very briefly, the whole-hog, Truman-sponsored Thomas bill, repealing the Taft-Hartley Act outright, is now before the Senate, having been reported by a majority of the Senate Labor Committee. Also before the Senate is the recently presented report of the Labor Committee minority, headed by Senator Robert A. Taft. This recommends a middle ground between the Taft-Hartley Act and the Thomas bill. But even this middle ground represents a long retreat from Senator Taft's former position.

What is most striking about the minority report, however, is the absence from it of the names of Senators Aiken, Morse and Ives. Aiken of Vermont and Morse of Oregon are both Republican members of the Labor Committee. Ives of New York is the most respected Republican authority on labor legislation. Although lack of seniority caused Ives to be dropped from the Labor Committee, Senator Taft went to very great lengths to secure his public support.

The plain fact is that Senator Taft wanted few things more than to have these progressive Republicans marching side by side with him in this struggle over labor policy. His real objective, in fact, was to prepare a Taft-Ives bill; and the minority report he has now presented is his substitute for the bill he wanted to offer. Another plain fact is that the three progressive Republican Senators did not want to be Senator Taft's comrades-in-arms. Hence the present oddly complicated legislative picture.

IF YOU ANALYZE the picture's component elements, however, several striking points emerge. First, if Senator Taft so much wanted the company of the progressives, he will not fight them very desperately on the floor. Second, Senators Ives, Morse and Aiken have still retained their freedom of action. Third, the whole apparent trend is favorable to the labor groups.

A sign of the times is the remarkable fact that Senator Ives, the Republican, has found himself in rather complete agreement on labor legislation with Paul Douglas of Illinois, the new Democratic left-winger. Indeed, it is understood that Ives would be far from averse to working with Douglas on a Douglas-Ives bill, which would serve as a substitute for both the Thomas bill and the Taft minority report. The idea is probably impractical, however, like so many good ideas.

Meanwhile, there is a political moral in this situation. Only two years ago, the Republic was supposed to be in danger if a statute less strong than the Taft-Hartley Act by one jot or one tittle was even considered for a moment. The act had a great deal to do with the Republican defeat, which surely brought no happiness to the business community that demanded such strong labor legislation. And now the Taft-Hartley Act is going down the drain. The moral is: "Be moderate, even when you're on top, because some day, you won't be."

One-Man Army

Referring to the story about the GI who felled eight Russian officers in a Vienna hotel, may I respectfully urge that you recommend this man to appointment as Secretary of State. If protocol forbids such an appointment, as is possible, then I suggest that after the required official slap on the wrist, Pfc. Touhey be decorated with a Congressional Medal of Honor the size of a frying pan, for devotion to his country above and beyond the call of duty.

H. E. KRAMER.
Washington.

Amphibious Attack

It seems to me that Joseph Alsop, in your issue of May 1, has leaped heedlessly to some weak and dangerous conclusions. In explaining why Secretary of Defense Johnson found it an "easy decision" to halt construction on the Navy's new carrier, the "United States," Mr. Alsop stated that the Navy and Marine Corps are still fighting the dead Pacific campaigns of 1941-45, that both forces are now far too large for their present missions, as such, and that finally "carriers and Marines cannot be used against the Russian land mass as they were against Japanese-held islands. Putting down Russian submarines will be the naval task."

Mr. Alsop of course is completely mistaken. Actually, even the most simple-minded person can look at the Eastern Hemisphere and note that this great Eurasian land mass is encircled by a coastline nearly eight times that of the United States. It is also completely surrounded by islands, each of which bears its own strategic importance as a potential base of future military operations.

Russia, whom Hitler and Napoleon found virtually impregnable by land, crouched behind her icy steppes and barrier mountains, is quite vulnerable by sea. The Mediterranean-Black Sea route to the "soft underbelly" is one that the British used very efficaciously in the Crimean war. Eurasia, then, with its Baltic, Arctic, Pacific, and Mediterranean shorelines, offers our Navy and Marines a multitude of opportunities for attack.

No sane follower of today's headlines can countenance reducing the Navy to a mere submarine patrol and the Marines to a blue-coated police force. Such action might well be the first step toward America's losing of World War III.

"Dogs For Science"

I was one of those who you say misunderstood your April 20 "Dogs or Children" editorial. "Dogs for Science" (April 27) shows that you misunderstood my letter of April 23. The point is this. No safe and dependable line can be drawn between lost pets and stray dogs. There are innumerable ways in which a licensed dog can lose the evidence of his status.

Granting that in many instances a dog's fate would be no worse in the laboratory than in the gas chamber, I still maintain that the dangers inherent in the Miller bill greatly outweigh its merits. It is not as though the existence of scientific research hinged upon passage of the measure. If research agencies need rats or guinea pigs for experimentation, they breed them. If they must have dogs, the same method is available.

I have been distressed by the violence of some of the criticisms which your correspondents have directed at the District Pound in consequence of my letter. There was a blunder, such as may occur at times in any large institution. But I did not say or imply that the Pound was badly administered—and I do not consider that it is.

C. BRADFORD MITCHELL.
Washington.

Allow me to emit my angry howl. I am a dog, a male dog. I come from an average middle-class American dog family. I am also the chairman of the Society For Prevention of Cruelty to Humans.

We dogs feel that it is our sacred duty to be man's best friend. We feel we were created for this purpose and if we can save lives through our submission to the medical profession, we do not want any human crackpots to deny us this sacred trust. It is often the case when fellow dogs complain that many humans are not worth saving and would be better off in illness and misery. However, this is beside the point, for all who belong to my organization are under the constitutional oath to submit to any and all medical experimentations.

We believe that these tests, experiments and operations are necessary and are beneficial not only to humans, but to us dogs as well. The growth of the veterinary branch of medicine throughout the world is good testimony that we are bettering our own race by unselfish devotion to the human race.

BRUNO.
Washington.

Maryland Health Plan

We, in Maryland, are very proud of the efforts we are making in handling our own health program. I do want to take this opportunity to thank you for the splendid articles you are publishing on Maryland's health problem.

Because I approve so heartily of Mrs. Meyer's splendid articles, I have taken the liberty of inserting them in the Congressional Record in order that other members of Congress may see what we in Maryland are trying to do without Federal aid.

"Question Of Salvation"

I wish to commend you for your editorial, "Question of Salvation," appearing in your May 1 issue, but I do not believe you went far enough.

The church is a creature of man and not of God and the rules for salvation are laid down by Jesus Christ himself in God's book, which was written many years before there was any Christian church and according to the rules there laid down, all that is required is faith, righteousness and keeping of the commandments and nothing at all is said about being required to belong to any church.

Russian Treaties vs. The Pact

The British-Japanese treaty of 1902 provided that if Japan became involved in war with another state, Britain would remain neutral; if Japan became involved with two or more states, Britain would join Japan. As amended in 1905, the British-Japanese alliance provided that Britain would act with Japan in case the latter should be attacked by one power.

Under the cover of this alliance, Japan gained strength rapidly. The first fruit was the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-05, whereby Japan acquired Russia's leases in China. In 1910 Japan annexed Korea. Entering World War I as Britain's ally, Japan seized the German islands in the Pacific and held them thereafter as a mandatory power. In 1915 Japan made its notorious 21 demands on China at a time when China was obliged to comply. The program of the 21 demands set the stage for Japanese attacks on Manchuria and North China in the 1930s.

The growth of Japanese power, under the cover of the British - Japanese alliance of 1902-22, resulted in increased tension and enmity between the United States and Japan. By the time of Pearl Harbor, Japan had become a formidable foe. The United States was obliged to carry practically all the Japanese end of World War II.

In May 1942, Britain and Russia formed the present British-Russian alliance. Britain then bound itself not to act with other states against Russia. Clearly, the British authors of the new alliance foresaw an American-Russian conflict after World War II and arranged things, as far as possible, to assure Britain's neutrality in such a conflict.

Although Britain was a wartime ally of the United States in May 1942, the British-Russian alliance then formed was (and is) aimed chiefly at the United States. It makes it impossible for the United States to secure an effective ally against Russia.

The fruits of the British-Russian alliance are comparable to those of the British-Japanese alliance. Reliable reports state that the British have permitted their Chinese port of Hong Kong to be used as a base of supply by Chinese Communists and as a nerve center of Communist activities in China. No effective resistance to Soviet communism can be organized as long as Britain is an ally of Russia, pledged not to enter into any alliance or coalition against Russia.

Under the cover of a British alliance, Russia is gaining strength, precisely as Japan did between 1902 and 1922. Russia's gains have intensified American-Russian enmity, just as Japan's gains intensified American-Japanese enmity in the days of the British-Japanese alliance. If the Communists gain control of all China, our position in Japan will be perilous. If we become involved in a war in the Far East, the great British and French empires will be pledged not to join us in an alliance or coalition against Russia.

We are now asked to join the Atlantic Pact and in so doing to renew, confirm, and consecrate the British-Russian-French alliances—alliances that are directed against ourselves. We are asked to arm and to subsidize two allies of Russia that are pledged not to assist us in a major war. To do these weird things we are asked to forsake the foreign policy to which the Nation has adhered during the past 149 years—the policy of abstaining from peacetime military alliances.

If the United States ratifies the Atlantic Pact it will not act as an independent nation. Already, two of the principal sponsors of the Marshall Plan, Messrs. Clayton and Patterson, are pressing for a formal political union of the United States and Britain-western Europe.

If Russia is a potential enemy of the United States, then Congress ought to stop at once the policy of arming and subsidizing allies of Russia that are pledged not to aid us in a major war. If Russia is not a potential enemy, then there is no excuse for the Atlantic Pact and the 24 billion dollars which are to be extracted this year from American taxpayers for the cold war.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Labor Then And Now

AFTER the vote in the House it is clear that for the present the Taft-Hartley Act can be amended and given a new name, but it cannot be repealed. This Congress at this session will not go back to the Wagner Act. For what the House has shown it will not do, the Senate will be even less willing to do.

LIPPMANN

This means that despite Mr. Truman's election and the popular dislike of the record of the Eightieth Congress on domestic issues, there is still a majority in Congress, and presumably among the voters, who are convinced that the bargaining power of the big unions is too strong. Does this sentiment reflect an actual condition, or is it the result of pressure and propaganda by the inveterate enemies of organized labor?

THE WAGNER ACT was passed in 1935, and its purpose was to increase the power of the unions to organize and to bargain collectively. In 1935 there were about 10.6 million unemployed. The year before there had been about 11.3 million. In 1933, the first year of the New Deal, there were nearly 13 million. When the Wagner Act was passed, there had been a considerable improvement. But nothing like full employment was in sight. The supply of labor was greater than the demand. The bargaining power of the unions and indeed of almost all employes was low. There were more men and women wanting jobs than there were jobs, and therefore those who did the hiring were in the stronger bargaining position.

The Wagner Act, deliberately weighted against the employers, was under the conditions of 1935 a form of rough justice to equalize power. And as the farming communities and the smaller towns were also in bad straits, Roosevelt, unlike Mr. Truman today, was able to get farm support for labor legislation and urban support for farm legislation.

THE LARGE mass of the unemployed were not absorbed until war production got under way. But when they were absorbed, when full and even overfull employment prevailed, the bargaining power of the unions, which had been too low in 1935, became too great.

The union leaders then had not only the legal privileges of the Wagner Act but something unforeseen, and regarded as unlikely in 1935,—a labor market so favorable to labor that it was virtually impossible, especially during a war, to bargain with union labor. In certain conspicuous cases, which were dramatized by Mr. John L. Lewis, the excessive power was, in the view of the great majority of the people, abused.

THEN the reaction against the Wagner Act set in. It was exploited and envenomed by very reactionary elements. But Mr. Truman and the leaders of the big unions are deceiving themselves if they do not recognize that the Wagner Act with 10 million unemployed and the Wagner Act with full employment are two altogether different things. Full employment, which is now also a declared objective of national policy, has changed the bargaining position and brought about the demand for a reduction of the power of the unions.

So Mr. Truman is not trying to restore to the unions the position which Roosevelt won for them. As long as full employment is maintained, he is trying to give the unions more power than they ever in fact had under the New Deal. What he is asking Congress to sanction and confirm is the extraordinary position which union labor had, not under the New Deal, but during the war.

MR. TRUMAN has no mandate from the people to do that. In the Eightieth Congress, counting the non-voters who went on record, the House divided on the question of overriding the President's veto of the Taft-Hartley Act—338 to 89. Of the Eightieth Congress 127 members did not return last November, and most of them had supported the Taft-Hartley bill. This is impressive on amending the Taft-Hartley Act. But it is not anything like a mandate for its repeal. For while nearly 100 who supported it were retired, 227 who had supported it were reelected.

The Eighty-first Congress contains a majority—not a big majority but a majority—who are on record for the Taft-Hartley Act or something fairly near to it. There is no longer a sure majority which could again override the President's veto. But there is a sure majority to prevent repeal, and to compel compromise which at least on the crucial question of strikes against the public interest, is similar to the Taft-Hartley Act.

HERE, as on the civil rights fiasco, Mr. Truman has exhibited what Mr. Arthur Krock has described so well as "an inability to comprehend the limitations of success." He fooled most of us on the election; he is now showing many signs of fooling himself about the election.

Thus on the Wood bill, which is a modified Taft-Hartley bill, the Administration lined up 203 votes to oppose it. Of these some 130, and not many more, were drawn from the industrial and mining districts where organized labor has dominant political influence. Of the remainder most of the votes were cast by Democrats who showed their party loyalty but are looking for an acceptable compromise.

AN ACCEPTABLE compromise would be highly desirable at this time. For on the one hand the country is facing another period of industrial conflict over more pay for less work; on the other hand unemployment is increasing. The true interest of labor, as of the Nation, is to take all necessary measures to regulate the recession and to restore full employment when the necessary readjustment of prices and costs has taken place.

That will be harder to do if for lack of good will about a reasonably fair labor law, the country has to deal with the recession in the midst of serious and embittered labor trouble.

Patman Says McGraw-Hill Aided Russians With Its Ad

By The Associated Press

Representative Patman (D., Tex.) said yesterday that an advertisement of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. had aided the Russians, but the company replied that Patman had missed the point.

The Congressman said in a statement that the newspaper advertisement had passed on "pure propaganda about Russian accomplishments." He said the purpose was to help big business retain great control over the American economy.

The New York firm, which issues many trade publications, said it had "compared what the U. S. is not doing to extend its (industrial) capacity with what the Russians are doing to catch up with the U. S." The U. S. is way ahead of the Russians in capital equipment and the Russians "are now moving at a faster pace than we are," the company statement said.

"They will continue to do so unless our government lets United States industry build the tools it needs to keep ahead," it added.

As to motives, the firm said that Patman is "dead wrong." It said its editorials "have consistently opposed the cartelization of industry and all forms of unregulated monopoly, both in industry and labor."

McGraw-Hill published the advertisement last Monday in The Washington Post. It was headed "Give Us Tools" and said "the Eighty-first Congress can halt the Administration's Socialist program." It said "unneeded taxes and Government controls" would kill freedom of industrial planning and put the country in peril. "Nothing would please the Communists more," the advertisement said.

Patman, chairman of the House Small Business Committee, said the advertisement tried to show that large corporations should be allowed to keep excessive profits or industrial capacity would fall behind Russia's. He called this a false assumption.

Patman said the "Administration's program with its proposals to distribute to the stockholders their rightful profits and to open credit sources is an attempt to restore a proper balance to our economy in order that free and independent enterprise can again flourish. It is not an attempt to destroy big business."

Atlantic Flight Anniversary Marked Here

The thirtieth anniversary of the first transatlantic flight was commemorated in brief ceremonies yesterday afternoon in the Air Museum at the Smithsonian Institution.

The flight was made by the Curtis NC-4, United States Navy, from Rockaway, Long Island, to Plymouth, England, via Lisbon, Portugal.

The crew included four Navy officers, one of whom went only as far as Newfoundland a chief machinist mate, and a Coast Guard officer. They took off May 8 and arrived at Plymouth May 31, 1919. Two other flying boats, NC-1 and NC-3, which took off at the same time, were unable to complete the trip.

Yesterday, Vice Admiral John D. Price, deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air, paid tribute to the bravery of the pioneer fliers, and said that some of the techniques they developed are still in use.

Capt. Holden C. Richardson, U. S. N. (ret.), who designed the NC hulls, described technical details of the flying boats and the flight as he saw it as pilot of the NC-3.

Commander Antonio Belo, naval and military attache at the Portuguese Legation, presented a bronze plaque that is a replica of that marking the site where the NC-4 crew stepped ashore at Lisbon.

Others participating in the program were Carl W. Mitman, assistant to the secretary of the Smithsonian; Rear Admiral William N. Thomas, U.S.N., chief of chaplains, and the Navy Band, which played the original "NC-4 March."

Gulf Tideland Oil Fight to Get Court Airing

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Did the Founding Fathers intend to permit the United States to sue a State without its consent?

This question is due for an airing today before the Supreme Court in the Government's attempt to claim jurisdiction over the oil-rich tidelands off the coasts of Texas and Louisiana. It is an echo of the never-ending States rights controversy.

Nearly two years ago the Supreme Court ruled that the Federal Government had a "paramount" interest in similar oilfilled tidelands off California. Now the Government seeks the same rights in the two Gulf States.

The issue before the court is simply this: Can the United States in the person of Attorney General Tom Clark, bring a case against the two States? If it can, Clark will ask the court to declare primary Federal rights over the "lands, minerals and other things underlying the Gulf of Mexico adjacent to the coasts, seaward of low water mark."

Thus, if the court agrees, the Government could claim millions of dollars worth of royalties from wells offshore in the two States.

States' Contention

The States will contend before the court Tuesday, last oral arguments in any case this term, that the court cannot admit the Government's suit.

Louisiana, for example, has filed a brief covering the arguments in the constitutional convention on the relation between States and the Federal Government.

The State's attorney general Bolivar E. Kemp, jr., declares "Louisiana is a sovereign State which may not be sued without its consent and which very clearly has not consented to be sued in any document, anywhere, or otherwise" and he concludes that "hence this court (the Supreme Court) simply does not have jurisdiction over Louisiana. . . ."

Kemp contends the constitutional convention on five occasions rejected the very idea of such suits, now used by the Government in declaring it can bring the action.

Clark points out, however, that no such claim of immunity was raised in the California case.

President Vetoed Bill

During the long dispute since the 1947 court decision, Congress once voted to give the tidelands to the States. But President Truman vetoed the bill, and it failed to pass over his veto.

Last year, the House in the Republican-controlled 80th Congress again passed the bill, but it never came to a Senate vote. Its sponsors figured they could wait until the 81st Congress, when they would have a President not likely to veto the measure. But the Truman election upset that plan.

Now the next move appears to be up to the court. If it admits the suit, the drive will be on again to counteract the Government's legal moves by legislative action.

The prize is well worth fighting for—hundreds millions of dollars are involved.

Clayton Urges U. S. to Join ITO To Bolster Trade

William L. Clayton, former Undersecretary of State, said yesterday that world hopes for economic cooperation will be wrecked if the United States fails to join the International Trade Organization.

Clayton helped create the ITO when he was Undersecretary. Appearing on a State Department radio program, he said:

"If the United States rejects the charter I am sure there will be no International Trade Organization. And I'm afraid other countries might interpret our action as saying to them: 'We're through with economic cooperation. After this it's every country for himself and the devil take the hindmost.'"

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Thomas Blaisdel appeared on the same program. He said that under the Marshall Plan trade between eastern and western Europe is proceeding in spite of difficulties in transportation and the conflict between Russia and the Western world.

This trade is still below prewar level, Blaisdel said, but there is a chance it will come up to prewar during the coming year.

mander of Atlantic Fleet aircraft, said the Air Force is "interested" in the Banshee.

Besides the Jet demonstration, the Navy launched two P2V patrol bombers from the FDR for nonstop practice bombing missions to Moffett Field, Calif. Plans are being made also to land these bombers on carrier decks fairly soon. They give the same performance at 30,000 feet as B-29 superforts, according to Comdr. Richard Ashworth, who was bomb commander aboard the B-29 which dropped the atom bomb on Nagasaki.

Discussing the Navy's future role, Admiral Blandy said four fifths of the world's surface is water which will have to be crossed in a war, regardless of whether an enemy nation has a strong navy.

It was no disparagement of air transportation, he went on, to point out that every man overseas in World War II required 6½ tons of supplies per month and that air transportation could never handle that mission.

Besides transporting men and material to forward bases, Blandy said, the Navy will have to import raw materials—"uranium comes from the Belgian Congo"; support the economy of Allied nations, deny use of the sea to the enemy by attacking surface, submarine and air targets. It also will have to attack land targets prior to amphibious landings.

All these require air power under Navy control, the admiral said. He recalled that Britain tried a single air force concept and when the war started had to buy navy planes here because the Royal Air Force had neglected them.

Blandy's idea for swapping officers had a brief test last fall when 12 Air Force pilots participated in fleet exercises off Argentina and 225 Marine pilots flew with the Tactical Air Force in combined operations in Florida.

Navy Lawyer Standards Hit

would amend the bill to require the Navy to set up a legal system similar to those in operation by the Army and Air Force.

"The Navy has not now, and never has had, a corps of lawyers," he wrote.

"Until the recent war, it possessed a very small group of officers who were regular line officers who had been sent to law schools. The practice was to send these officers to sea for a tour of duty after their 'legal training.'

"Most of them had never been admitted to any bar outside of an officers' club."

He said the wartime need for legal talent forced the Navy to establish a separate office, staffed by civilian attorneys, to provide "competent legal assistance on contract and procurement matters."

Since the war, the Navy has transferred some lawyers from the naval reserve to its regular ranks "in the evident hope of regaining some lost ground," he said. But it considers them to be "specialists" and apparently has no plans to move them up through the promotion system, he commented.

Here at the Union Trust we believe that it's an important part of every banker's job to meet customers in their offices and help solve their business or banking problems—on the spot. Hence we say that, while we have two conveniently located banking floors in the heart of Washington, our real banking office covers the whole District of Columbia.

Union Trust officers make many calls—on customers and non-customers alike. We don't want to overlook any opportunities to make new friends or to broaden our contacts among the businessmen who are building a greater Washington.

Our calls give us a chance to tell why we think the Union Trust is a good place for businessmen to bank. We talk about our exceptionally strong ratio of capital funds to total deposits (1 to 10)—or about the fact that 99.4% of our total investment account is in U. S. Government securities with an average maturity of 44 months. And we emphasize the point that we are always ready to make loans for constructive business purposes.

Why not ask us to visit you the next time a banking problem affecting your business confronts you? We'd be pleased to discuss it with you—anywhere in our territory.

Churches Observe Mother's Day Here

Mother's Day was observed yesterday with special Protestant and Roman Catholic services.

In Protestant churches there were sermons on motherhood and the Christian family. In several congregations young people participated in the services, and presented flowers to their mothers.

Thousands of Catholics joined in an outdoor demonstration to Mary, the Mother of God, marking World Sodality Day, at Catholic University Stadium. Theme of the ceremony was "Peace Through Mary."

The program included the crowning of a statue of the Blessed Mother by May Queen Annette Carter Roberts of Landover, Md., and celebration of the Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington.

In his sermon, the Rev. Neil J. Gargan, pastor of St. Aloysius Church, North Capitol and I sts. nw., declared that it is "not enough to wring our hands ever so suppliantly, begging the intervention of heaven to prevent war simply because we don't want or don't like war.

"It is supremely important that we beg the help of Mary and the whole court of heaven so to act consistently and always in such a manner as to remove the causes of war and to promote the ways of peace. War is most certainly the absence of peace, but peace is immensely more than just the absence of war," he declared.

In his Mother's Day sermon at Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn st. nw., the Rev. C. Stanley Lowell challenged the idea of equality of the sexes.

"Though we can and should rejoice at the steps which have been taken under Christian inspiration to assure woman her place in society, it is quite possible that equality of the sexes may be something alien from this," he said.

"It may well be that woman's effort to achieve equality with men may result in a decline and degradation of her own status.

"In addition to a lost generation we now have a lost, self-pitying sex. Bereft of the protection which by nature belonged to her, woman now makes her drab pilgrimage from two-room apartment to job, to divorce court and back again."

"Let us renounce the heresy that it is more important to do business than to nurture character; let us dare to assert that human values should take precedence over material values."

Members of Trinity Lutheran Church, 4th and E sts. nw., celebrated at a festival service the 25th anniversary of the installation of the Rev. Hugo M. Hennig as pastor.

The Rev. August Koerber, pastor of Redeemer Lutheran Church, Newark, N. J., an l a classmate of Mr. Hennig at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, preached the sermon, and the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel, pastor emeritus of Christ Lutheran Church, 16th and Gallatin sts. nw., was the liturgist.

Day Observed by War Mothers at Arlington

Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) declared yesterday we must decide whether to resist the "further spread of the glacier of tyranny from Soviet Russia" on the "40-yard line, the 20-yard line or the half-yard line—too late."

Judd spoke before several hundred persons at the national Mother's Day observance of the American War Mothers at the amphitheater of Arlington Cemetery.

Judd said resistance to those who "do not believe that man's basic nature is to be free" must take the form of strengthening our country and expanding our freedoms to all our people. In addition, he said, we must assist other free peoples with our "know how" and team work.

The War Mothers' program was climaxed by the laying of single flowers at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by representatives of veterans and patriotic onganizations. Funds usually spent on wreaths were used to help disabled veterans, it was announced by Mrs. Robert E. Ridenhour, AWM past president, officiating in place of Mrs. Mabel Staples, president, who could not be present.

Massing of the colors was conducted by patriotic organizations under the Virginia Department, Veterans of Foreign Wars, with the American Legion's national guard of honor acting as guards in the flower ceremony at the Unknown Soldier's Tomb.

Marine Band Plays

Master of ceremonies was Daniel Dugan, past commander of John Lyons Post 3150, Virginia VFW. A concert by the U. S. Marine Band preceded the program.

In a Mother's Day program sponsored by the International Crossroads Forum at the central branch YMCA, Mrs. Margaret C. Holmes, wife of Representative Hal Holmes of Washington, spoke of the "great advantages" here for every ambitious young man, and praised the YMCA for providing contacts for better attitudes toward life. More than 200 boys away from home, including 21 from foreign countries, took part in the program.

Representative Ben Franklin Jensen (R., Iowa) last night addressed a Mother's Day meeting sponsored by the Elks Washington Lodge No. 15 at the lodge's ballroom, 919 H st. nw.

New, Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder
Not Only Cuts Down Tooth Decay
...But Actually Tastes Good, Too!

Nation's Dentists and Press Hail Amazing Scientific Discovery That Reduces Development of Dental Caries

IT'S ONE AMMONIATED POWDER THAT TASTES GOOD!

Unlike Those With Bitter, Medicinal Taste, Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Has a Refreshing Flavor You'll Really Enjoy

After years of tireless search for the answer to the problem of tooth decay, science at last has found it.

A remarkable scientific discovery now makes it possible to cut down this insidious affliction which causes millions of men, women and children untold pain, worry and expense.

Benefits—plus Taste

The matchless benefits of this discovery are yours in new, Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder. For it is based on a formula developed by University of Illinois scientists. And note this – Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's tastes good, too. The makers of Dr. Lyon's, realizing the importance of taste in a dentifrice, withheld Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's from the market until they had solved the problem of making a flavorful ammoniated powder. If you've tried other ammoniated powders, you'll appreciate Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's all the more. For it has a refreshing flavor that every member of your family will enjoy.

Destroys Decay-Causing Lactobacillus Acidophilus

And it's so wonderful for your teeth! It does what no other type of dentifrice has ever been able to do before. It destroys the bacteria which cause tooth decay. It breaks down film. And it frees teeth of sticky deposits in which decay-causing microbes lurk.

The formula on which Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's is based is so remarkable that it's been hailed by the nation's press with unabated enthusiasm. And dentists by the thousands are so impressed with its efficacy that they recommend the use of ammoniated powder without reservation.

Less Pain, Worry, Expense

By cutting down tooth decay and reducing the development of cavities, Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder can save you limitless pain, worry and misery. It can greatly reduce your dental expense and can give you, your children—your whole family—sounder, healthier, handsomer teeth.

Like regular Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's is outstanding for cleaning teeth. It removes film from your teeth—and even more—banishes ugly surface stains, too. In this way it makes your teeth doubly clean.

Start Right Away

Don't wait. This very day, start reducing tooth decay the good tasting Dr. Lyon's way. Ask your druggist for Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder. You need no prescription.

WHY DENTISTS SAY YOU SHOULD USE AMMONIATED POWDER!

Your dentist is fully familiar with the facts about Ammoniated Tooth Powder. He knows that an ammoniated dentifrice is the best dentifrice for cutting down tooth decay and helping to prevent cavities. Because of reports of the remarkable results gained through its use, dentists are recommending that their patients use ammoniated powder.

So waste no time. Get the best—get Ammoniated Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder!

Wife Writes Note, Then Spouse Shoots

Seattle, Wash., May 8 (U.P.).—A pretty red-haired tavern-owner's wife wrote a death note on a peppermint candy box today as she waited for her husband to kill her and a friend before shooting himself.

Mrs. Millie Weidum, 28, was shot fatally and Frank Howe, 33, a friend, was killed by Otto Weidum, 30, who then blasted his head off with a double-barrel shotgun.

The shooting ocurred after Weidum found Howe visiting his wife. He ordered him from the house and followed in a car to make certain Howe left the neighborhood.

Police said Weidum apparently returned to the house, where he ordered his wife to write a note on the bottom of a large candy box.

"This is Frank's pen, he says to use it. Ott says we're both very sorry it had to happen. But that's life, even if it's short," she wrote.

The writing was precise and firm. Police said the note was apparently intended for Mrs. Ann Hampton, Redmond, Wash., Mrs. Weidum's mother.

"If Frank shows up, which Ott says he will, he will be shot. Ott says he loves me more than anything in the world, and won't share me with anybody.

"I love Ott, Mom, I always have and always will, but he wants me to die. Love always, Your Girl."

Howe returned to the house about an hour after he was forced to leave. Police said Weidum apparently met him at the front door and fired two shots into his abdomen at point-blank range. He used a .22-caliber rifle. Howe was found crumpled on the front lawn with his hands still in his pockets.

Weidum locked both doors before using the small rifle on his wife and taking his own life with the shotgun.

Washington Compositions Introduced

By Richard Keith
Post Reporter

The second in a series of five concerts devoted to American music was given last night at the National Gallery. The program was made up exclusively of first performances of orchestral works by Washington composers.

Each composition was competently written and in almost every case the intents of the writer were clerly discernible. The orchestra had rehearsed them carefully, with the result that there were no serious mishaps of the type that so often occurs in readings of new music. The conductor, Richard Bales, is himself a composer and understands the importance of a first performance to the composer.

Mary Howe's "Agreeable Overture," which opened last night's concert, is conservative in style but completely individual in idiom. Frankly lyrical, its melodic material is intelligently handled and well knit into the total form. No one could disagree with Miss Howe's title.

Although well orchestrated, "Mountain Lake Reflections," by R. Deane Shure, is so completely derived from the exhausted impressionist styles of Debussy and Karg-Elert that it is hard to think of it as contemporary music. Likewise, Eric Bovet's "Introduction and Allegro" is, here and there, colored heavily by the distinctive styles of other musicians. There are, however, many arresting and quite original moments.

Everybody sat up and took notice when Emerson Meyers began his "Concertino for Piano and Orchestra." After the first few phrases, we knew that this was flesh-and-blood music. Exciting, brilliant, and new sounding, it moved in well-planned sections to its logical end.

After intermission, Rex Hinshaw, clarinetist, gave a fine performance of La Salle Spier's "Journey With a Clarinet." It was a long journey to about every place on this earth, ending up somewhere in Scotland, or perhaps Dixie. Several of the sections are very cleverly written and, if judiciously cut, the piece would make a successful "pop concert" number. The same might be said of Dorothy Radde Emery's jazzy "Country Dances."

The program closed with a brilliant and engaging piece by Alba Rosa Vietor called "Primavera Lombarda." A curious combination of pseudo-tone-row melodies and Italian street son, it holds the listener's attention throughout.

Inquest to Hear Wife in Slaying

Mrs. Mary Agnes Lane, 45, of 5407 First st. nw., will appear at a coroner's inquest into the fatal stabbing of her husband, Norman John Lane, 47, at 11:30 a. m. today in the District Morgue.

Lane was found dead in the kitchen of their apartment Saturday morning, after Mrs. Lane got in touch with police. The mother of three children, Mrs. Lane admitted to police that she stabbed her husband Friday evening after he struck and kicked her, during one of their frequent quarrels.

Plane Crash-Landing Kills 3, Injures Another

Buffalo, Mo., May 8. (AP).—A light plane crashed in a field near here today, killing three of its four occupants.

The survivor was Mrs. Kenneth Ward, of Chicago Ill. Both her arms were broken and she was suffering from shock.

Jewish Appeal Drive Begun By 250 Here

About 250 volunteer workers set out yesterday to collect $2,500,000 in greater Washington toward the national United Jewish Appeal's $250,000,000 goal.

"This is American Jewry's year of historic opportunity," Rabbi Isadore Breslau, associate general chairman of the area drive, told the volunteers at a kickoff breakfast at the Jewish Community Center, 1529 16th st. nw.

"The problem of the displaced Jews in Europe can be solved this year if the UJA drive is successful," he added. He said about 250,000 European Jews expect to migrate to Israel this year.

The first major activity of the campaign will be an all-day meeting of the Automotive Division at the Woodmont Country Club Tuesday.

Rabbi Max Schenk, Australian Jewish leader, will speak at a dinner concluding the day's meeting. The appeal will end May 27.

Man Shot in Gun Battle as Devout Worship

Two men engaged in a gun and knife fight fight just around the corner from Immaculate Conception Church, 713, N st. nw., yesterday morning while churchgoers worshiped unaware.

Algie Wilkerson, 38, and Lewis Nathaniel Mason, 60, both of 1249 8th st. nw., were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Wilkerson was treated at Freemen's Hospital for a bullet wound in his right leg.

Police Pvt. Tilmon O'Bryant of the Second Precinct said he was directing traffic near the church when he heard several shots.

He investigated and saw Mason come out of the house at 1249 8th st., waving a gun. O'Bryant said he ordered Mason to drop the gun several times before Mason obeyed.

As he attempted to take Mason into custody, Wilkerson came out of the house with a knife and tried to slash Mason, the policeman added.

A passerby called for additional policemen and several scout cars responded, but O'Bryant had both men under control. Both men are scheduled to appear in Municipal Court today.

Yesterday afternoon, in another fight in a restaurant in the 1000 block of 7th st nw., William Bradford, 35, of 2205 1st st. nw., was shot in the back.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where doctors said the bullet apparently did not strike a vital organ. Police arrested Steve Vulgas, 52, of 814 L st. nw., and charged him with assault with a dangerous weapon.

With Shirley Povich

CLEVELAND, May 8.—In Cleveland the fans are ing over the new pitching pattern apparently adopted against Lou Boudreau, who is rather pained about it himself.

Boudreau has been hit three times by pitched balls this season, and on numerous other occasions he has been sent floundering into dirt. Cleveland is convinced its a dust-off technique opposing pitchers are using against the Indians' manager.

POVICH

Boudreau indicated he was fed up with the tactics himself, the other day after Harry Dorish of the Red Sox whacked him on the elbow with an inside pitch. The next time up he bunted toward first base in an attempt to draw Dorish into a spikeable spot, but the Boston pitcher discreetly kept out of the play.

Fact is, the pitchers don't like the way Boudreau crowds the plate and with that .355 batting average of his he's a natural enemy anyway. With his exaggerated crouch, Boudreau is literally sticking his neck out over the plate, and the pitchers want none of that.

Today with Larry Doby at bat, and Boudreau squatting in the batter's circle 20 feet away, Ray Scarborough cut loose with a wild pitch that sailed behind Doby's back. "Omigod," exclaimed a Cleveland baseball writer, "now they're throwing at Boudreau even before he gets to bat."

UMPIRE-IN-CHIEF Cal Hubbard called time in the seventh inning today to walk out to the pitcher's box and warn Scarborough about throwing spitballs. He didn't like the way Scarborough put his pitching hand to his mouth before delivering the ball.

"Never threw a spitball in my life," said Scarborough innocently, "and wouldn't know how, even if I could get away with it."

Bill Veeck denies that there was any pulling of strings to get his hard-hitting, weak-fielding outfielder, Hank Edwards, waived out of the league so he could be sold to the Chicago Cubs.

"Every club in the American League had a chance to claim him," said Veeck. "It's surprising how many players can be waived out. Why, I remember when I was with the Cubs back in 1935 we had waivers all season on Bill Lee, a pitcher who won 27 games for us that year. Everybody passed him up, figuring correctly that we couldn't let him go."

CERTAINLY the most modest of all ball players is Stan Spence, traded by the Browns to the Red Sox the other day in the Al Zarilla deal, along with some heavy Boston cash.

Talking of his dismal year with the Red Sox in 1948, when he batted only .235, Spence said. "If I was Joe McCarthy managing me last year, I'd have got rid of me quick."

HANK GREENBERG, roving vice president of the Cleveland Indians, was sitting in the stands today, bemoaning the passing of the great hitters of the Ruth-Foxx-Gehrig-Simmons type.

"They all went out the same way, suckers for that fast ball right through the gut, the pitch they used to murder," said Hank. "That's what finally got me, too. Couldn't get my bat around against that good high fast ball. It isn't the legs of the old guys that goes first. It's that old snap in the wrist. The reflexes aren't there any more.

IN AN ATTEMPT to drum up some business at the gate, the Browns set a new low for gate receipts the other day. They distributed thousands of passes entitling the holder to general admission for fifty cents instead of $1.20. It didn't work out very satisfactorily. Only 3,994 were in the park on a Saturday afternoon against Washington.

On each fifty-cent admission, the Browns' take was, honest, one penny. Of the 50 cents, they had to give the visiting club 26 cents, and State, Federal and city taxes consumed 23 cents.

The Browns scarcely took in enough to pay for the balls used during the game.

Scarborough, Hudson Humble Cleveland, Robertson Homers

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Cleveland, May 8.—Ho-hum, the Nats won a coupla more ball games. And in Cleveland, of all places, where they were supposed to curl up and play dead before the champion Indians. They didn't. They licked the Indians 7-3, and then licked 'em again, 2 to 0.

So, it's seven straight for Washington's astonishing athletes who haven't lost a game in the West and are giving the impression they are headed for the first division.

Two pitchers were all that were required by the Nats in today's double-header. They trotted out a powerful pair in Ray Scarborough and Sid Hudson. Scarborough had a breeze in the opener, backed by 13 hits against Gene Bearden, Cleveland's 20-game winner of last year and others.

After the Nats handed Bearden his first defeat of the season—highlighted by Al Evans' two-bagger with the bases full. Hudson heaped further ignominy on the Injuns. He handed 'em their first shut-out.

Hudson Hurls 4-Hitter For First Victory

Hudson pitched an elegant four-hitter for his first victory of the season, and 49,754 Cleveland fans watched in dismay as the Indians failed to get a runner as far as second base against fast-balling Sidney.

Hudson's handsome work wasn't really rewarded until the sixth inning when the Nats got him a run off Al Benton, the old Detroit right-hander. Little Sam Dente drove it in.

Sherry Robertson had a hand in both of the Nats' runs in that second game. He opened the sixth with a single, went to second on a wild pitch, and pranced home when Dente delivered a smart single to right.

All by himself, Robertson got the Nats their second run an inning later. With two out, he lined a fierce drive over the righ field fence at the 365-foot mark for his fourth homer of the season.

The Indians never did assault Hudson for more than a single. He walked the first man he faced, and nobody else. He didn't permit more than one man on base in any inning. In the eighth and ninth there was mild trouble, though.

Orestes Minoso, the Indians' Cuban outfielder, opened the eighth with a single to right, but Dente eased the pressure with a shoe-top stab of Pinch-Hitter Hegan's liner, for a double play. And in the ninth, Hudson had to make a self-defense grab of Doby's liner in front of his face, to keep the Indians off base.

Bearden Chased in First Game

Bearden took little to the mound with him in that first game except his reputation as a 20-game winner last season and the Nats were rid of him in four innings, by which time they had seven hits and a 4-1 lead.

He walked Coan and Lewis to open the game and Vollmer drove in a run with a single to left. He escaped damage despite two hits in the third, but in the fourth the Nats banged him for three runs.

Eddie Yost and Eddie Robinson opened up with singles, and when Bearden threw late to third on Dente's bunt, everybody was safe. Evans powered a long double to center for two runs, and Coan's fly to right brought Dente home from third.

Frank Papish was handled roughly by the Nats in the seventh when Lewis and Kozar opened up with two-baggers that brought Satchel Paige on the scene. Satchmo was no rousing success, either. Yost and Robinson singled, and the Nats got a third run out of the inning when the Indians messed up a double play on Dente's grounder.

All this while, Scarborough was doing a clever job on the Indians. They bumped him for two runs after a walk, Doby's single and a pitch that the dug into Boudreau's arm filled the bases with one out in the third. Gordon's force out produced one run, and Mickey Vernon's infield hit another.

But thereafter Scarborough was in command. Mitchell tripled to center in the seventh, and scored on a fly ball, but the Indians couldn't produce any kind of a hit in the eighth and ninth.

In short . . . Lou Boudreau, hit by pitched balls on the same elbow twice within a week, managed the Indians from the bench in today's second game . . . Eddie Yost was twice shaken up by Larry Doby on slides into third base, and didn't like it . . . the Nats ended their streak of home runs ae eight consecutive games, but Sherry Robertson's blast in today's final marked the ninth consecutive day in which they have hit homers . . . the Nats can rest on their laurels tomorrow open date . . . on Tuesday, Mickey Haefner will draw Bob Filer as an opponent, as usual.

Giants Beat Cubs, 10 to 1, Take Lead

New York, May 8 (AP).—New York's high-riding Giants clicked off their sixth straight victory and moved into undisputed possession of first place in the National League today by walloping the Chicago Cubs 10-1.

The Giants backed Larry Jansen's steady pitching with a 14-hit attack against four Chicago hurlers.

Whitey Lockman led the Giants with four safeties while Bobby Thomson weighed in with his fourth home run and a double.

Jansen yielded 10 hits but blanked the Bruins until the ninth when Frankie Gustine's homer gave the losers their only run.

Byrne Blanks Tigers, 12-0, With 2-Hitter

Detroit, May 8 (AP).—Lefthander Tommy Byrne of the New York Yankees gave the Detroit Tigers only two hits today as he beat them, 12-0. The Yankees got 17 hits in snapping the four-game winning streak of Virgil Trucks.

Byrne had a no-hitter going until Detroit Shortstop Johnny Lipon led off in the sixth inning with a scratch single to left field.

Bob Swift added Detroit's other hit when he slammed a single to left with two out in the ninth inning.

The Tigers were charged with four errors as they were whitewashed for the first time this season before 52,891 unhappy Tiger rooters.

Gene Woodling scored five of the Yankee runs and got three hits, including a triple. Yogi Berra got three hits, including a double and drove in four runs to make Byrne's job easier.

Those Wondrous Nats Have Whole Town Talking

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

PRAISE 'EM or belittle 'em, but don't be indifferent about those Nats. If you are, you're out of step today, brother, so shape up.

They're the talk of the town, s'help me. Everywhere—practically everywhere at least—the unbelievable accomplishments of the Kuhel Klan is the No. 1 topic. Hasn't been anything like 'em to sweep the city since the flu epidemic 15 years ago.

Down around 14th and E streets nw., old Scotty, a wrinkled-faced newshawk who hasn't smiled since he came over from Glasgow is a new man.

"Look at this," the grizzly little guy shouts, hustling his newspapers. "WE beat the world's champions twice. Read all about it. The Nats are the nuts-"

Government workers have ceased and desisted from all talk about annual leave and pay raises to talk about the club that's won seven straight.

Garrulous cab drivers had their radios tuned full blast during the broadcast of yesterday's double-header. A few even had their "off-duty" tags stuck up during the game.

ONE HACKIE, so smitten by the success of the club, even gave two newspaper reporters a three-zone ride for free when Sherry Robertson smacked that homer in the second game.

Their remarkable play has taken years off of 79-year-old Clark Griffith, their president. When Sid Hudson slammed the door in the face of the Tribe, "Uncle" Griff cut up a fancy little jig in his office, where he and a few friends gathered to hear the game broadcast.

And old friend, Arch McDonald, is as enthusiastic as a 10-year-old kid seeing his first ball game. There's a new lilt to his voice as he describes the doings of his favorite ball club.

There's no containing Bob Wolff, Arch's partner on the game broadcasts. Bob becomes so excited announcing a Nat surge that you just know he's gonna leap through that microphone telling you about it.

And our own H. Heft. He's something special. Saturday he said he'd "be out of this world" if the Nats beat Cleveland twice. Heft didn't report for work yesterday. Maybe he meant it.

Bosox Whip Browns Twice, 10-6 and 4-3

St. Louis, May 8 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox swept a double-header from the St. Louis Browns today, 10 to 6 and 4 to 3, as the Browns suffered their tenth straight defeat. The first game went 13 innings and the second was called at the end of the eighth on account of darkness.

A lone single by Dom DiMaggio off the right field wall with the bases loaded brought the Red Sox from behind in the eighth inning of the nightcap, after two home runs by Dick Kokos had helped the Browns to a 3-2 edge.

The Browns battled the Beantowners on even terms for 12 innings in the opener. Then Tom Ferrick, who had pitched brilliantly for six innings in relief, complained of fatigue and gave way to Joe Ostrowski. Joe proved to be just what the Red hose were waiting for any they promptly pushed over four runs. Ted Williams singled home DiMaggio for the first run. Two others came in on a wild pitch by Ray Shore who replaced Ostrowski.

Brown, Nichols in Hall of Fame

New York, May 8 (AP).—Mordecia Peter (Three Finger) Brown and Charles A. (Kid) Nichols, two great pitchers of the past, today joined 56 other baseball immortals in the game's hall of fame at Cooperstown, N. Y.

Nichols, now 79, compiled an amazing record with the Boston National League in the last decade of the nineteenth century. From 1890, when he joined Boston, to 1899, he won at least 21 games each year and for seven consecutive seasons—1891 to 1897—he notched at least 30 victories.

Brown, who gained his fame with the Chicago Cubs in the early part of the century, died last February 14, at the age of 72.

Brown, nicknamed "Three Fingers" because he had lost two fingers of his right hand in an accident, won his fame with the Chicago Cubs of the Frank Chance era.

His major-league record shows 239 victories and 130 losses. He participated in four World Series—1906-7-8-10—winning five and losing four.

Burt Whitman, Boston Scribe, Dies; Stricken at Game

St. Louis, May 8 (AP).—Burt Whitman, veteran sports editor of the Boston Herald, died of a brain attack here tonight. He suffered a stroke while covering the Boston Red Sox-St.Louis Browns doubleheader at Sportsman's Park and was rushed to a hospital where death occurred at 7:15 PCD.

James Costen Dead; South Bend Editor

South Bend, Ind., May 8 (U.P.) James M. Costin, sports editor of the South Bend Tribune, died today of a heart attack. He was 55. Costin, a native of Peru, Ind., worked on papers in his home town, Pittsburgh and Chicago before coming here in 1942.

Bucs Win 2, Knock Braves Out of Lead

Boston, May 8 (AP).—Pittsburgh's Pirates knocked the Boston Braves into third place today by twice defeating the National League champions, 8-3 and 11-8, before a disappointed throng of 27,211. The double victory also boosted the Pirates from the league cellar to sixth place.

The Braves were tied with the New York Giants going into today's games. The Giants and Brooklyn, the latter now in second place, both won.

Reds Win in 12th, 14-7; Lose Nightcap, 8 to 1

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP). — Bill Nicholson drove in five runs with a single and his fourth home run of the season today as the Philadelphia Phillies won the second game of a doubleheader with the Cincinnati Reds, 8 to 1.

Cincinnati took the opener, 14 to 7, when they battered pitchers Schoolboy Rowe and Blix Donnelly for seven runs in the 12th inning. The second game was halted after six innings by the Pennsylvania Sunday Blue Law curfew.

Runner-Up In Derby Likes Route

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

With the Derby bunting tucked under his saddle cloth, the amazing Ponder is looking around for new fields to conquer. While the Calumet hero is basking in his newly acquired spotlight, the men about race tracks are pondering the probable starting line-up, and the outcome, of the seventy-third Preakness Stakes come Saturday at old Pimlico.

Due to ship out of Louisville for Baltimore, Ponder, the now diamond-studded colt, is expected to face perhaps 11 of the remaining 3-year-old formidables in the Maryland classic.

With his stretch-eating thriller at Churchill Downs still fresh in mind, the gallant son of Derby-Preakness winning Pensive seems a logical favorite at Baltimore, but Marylanders already are inclined to argue that matter.

Not as Long

Some believe before the week is out Greentree Stable's Capot may occupy the role of public choice. The reason? Because the Preakness, at a mile and three sixteenths, is a sixteenths shorter than the Derby.

True, Ponder was three lengths on top of Capot when slugging Steve Brooks pushed him into the finish line at Derbyville. However, Capot was still in front at the sixteenth pole.

It also is pointed out that Ponder, a come-from-behinder, may find the sharper Pimlico turns and shorter stretch working against him.

Switches from Derby winners to new favorites are not unknown in the Preakness. In 1942, Shut Out whipped Alsab at Louisville. However, a week later, Alsab was the choice over the Greentree colt and made good, too.

In addition to Ponder and Capot all indications are that Isidor Bieber's Palestinian, the Derby show horse, and Clifford Moore's Old Rockport, fourth at the Downs, will be starters at the ancient Old Hilltop oval.

Fred W. Hooper's Olympia, Derby goat when he finished sixth as an odds-on choice, probably will attempt to make amends. Some of his faithful rooters will say, "A change in tracks sometimes changes horses." At any rate he was 14 lengths behind the astonishing Ponder at Derby's end.

When the Derby turned into a free-for-all due to Olympia's faltering, at least two colts now in New York set their sails toward Chesapeake Bay. They are Daniel Hess' Blue Lancer and King Ranch's Curandero, who were first and second in Belmont's Thrift Purse last Saturday.

Blue Lancer, hero of Bowie's new stake, the Farrell Handicap, is a son of Blue Swords, third to Count Fleet in the 1943 Derby.

New Threats

Considered a definite starter is Sun Bahram, stretch-driving son of Bahram, and owned by Mrs. Ebon H. Ellison, jr., former Mrs. Willis Sharpe Kelmer. Sun Bahram, to be ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, Mr., has shown a return to form after a dismal Chesapeake Stakes showing.

Today's Survivor Stakes at Pimlico will hold the Preakness key for three starting possibilities. They are Swap Out, another King Rancher; Sylvester W. Labrot, jr.'s Taran, fourth to Capot in the Chesapeake and Crispin's Ogilebay's Noble Impulse, a star as a 2-year-old but a nonwinner so far this season.

There would be some merit to a swing toward Capot in the Preakness. If the Menow-Piquet colt has a home grounds it is Pimlico. It was at that track he turned in record time last year despite being disqualified in favor of Slam Bang when he swerved into the latter in the stretch run.

'Wonderful,' Says Brooks Of Victory

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

How does it feel to ride a Kentucky Derby winner?

They asked Steve Brooks that question, for perhaps the 100th time, at Washington airport early Sunday morning as he stopped briefly en route to Pimlico.

"It's wonderful!" said the handsome little guy, as he was expected to say. "Naturally I'd rather win the Derby than any other race."

Steve was more tired than joyous, however. And in spite of his enthusiasm it seemed that he considered his triumph on Ponder as just part of a day's work. He talked calmly, almost without interest, of Ponder's chances in the Preakness this week.

"I'll ride him," he said, "if he goes in the Preakness. But I can't be any more confident about Saturday than I was for the Derby. Ponder ran a great race; he'll have to do it again to win the Preakness."

That Brooks lacked confidence in Ponder, a mount he'd never ridden or even seen before Saturday, is attested by the fact neither he nor his pretty wife bet a nickel on the race.

More excited than Brooks about his winning ride, apparently, were Jockeys Headley Woodhouse and Doug Dodson, who accompanied Brooks on the flight from Louisville. They rode third-place Palestinian and thirteenth-place Wine List, respectively. Both said their horses "flattened out."

"I was about a half length in front of Ponder," said Pallestinian's tiny pilot," when he made his big move in the stretch. He came by me like a flash. Capot was three lengths ahead, and I didn't think Ponder had a chance to catch the leader. He sure did, though—but good!"

Brooks, who doesn't know yet how much his Derby triumph will be worth to him, will be back in the saddle at Pimlico today. He rode two winners there Friday, before leaving for Churchill Downs.

"Even a Derby winner has to keep on the job," he said, grinning.

At Pimlico

The big week in Maryland racing commences this afternoon with the running of the Survivor Stakes, a "clearing house" event for the Preakness on Saturday. There are many extracurricular activities on tap during the week. On Wednesday morning the annual "ladies race" will be staged with members of the weaker sex piloting throughbreds over the five furlong mark. On Thursday morning the annual yearling show for Maryland foaled horses will be held on the clubhouse lawn and on the same afternoon a delegation of Virginia horsemen will be on hand to present a trophy to the winner of an event honoring the Virginia Horsemen's Association. ## Blast Victim May Lose Leg

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—A physician said tonight there is a "slim chance, less than 50-50," of saving the right leg of Chuck Koney, infielder for the Louisville Colonels who was injured in an explosion at his home yesterday.

Dr. Paul Patchen said he will not know for several days whether amputation will be necessary. Koney's condition was reported unchanged tonight at South Shore Hospital.

The 22-year-old player had stepped off at his home here Friday night to visit his wife and two-week-old daughter, Caroline. He was preparing to leave for Louisville last night when he smelled smoke and went down to the basement to investigate.

A garbage burner exploded, and Koney's leg was burned and cut by jagged metal.

Koney, a second baseman, is the property of the Boston Red Sox.

Mack Saxon Dies, Headed Navy's 'Fitness' Program

Mack Saxon, civilian head of the Navy's physical fitness program, died at his home in Arlington yesterday. He was 47 years old.

Saxon, former star fullback at University of Texas and later football coach at Texas School of Mines, was a native of Palestine, Tex., where his mother still lives. During the war, he served under Capt. Tom Hamilton, USN, in the Navy's physical fitness program.

Merchant Marines Win Dinghy Title; Navy 2d, GW Third

Annapolis, May 8.—The Merchant Marine Academy won the Middle Atlantic States dinghy championship here yesterday with a two-day total of 157 points. James Fegley scored 82 points for the Mariners for the high individual point total.

Navy was second with 131; George Washington, third, 128; followed by Georgetown, 125; Army, 105; Princeton, 98; Lafayette, 92; and Stevens Institute, 45.

Eric Nordholm scored 66 points and Pat Granger 62 for GW. The first two teams will represent the Middle Atlantic States in the Nationals at Ann Arbor, Mich., June 18. George Washington has a chance of going to the Nationals if Navy declines the invitation because of the late date.

Commission Planning To Ask Congress For Rating Changes

EFFICIENCY RATINGS: The Civil Service Commission will ask Congress to give it the authority to overhaul the rating system. A special message on the efficiency rating system is now being drafted in the agency.

In general, the commission wants the power merely to set up the standards and to police the various rating systems. Each agency would have the authority to set up its own rating system within the general guide and standards issued by the commission.

Also, the commission is inclined to go along with the Hoover Commission suggestion that ratings be used primarily to improve employe-supervisor relationships, and that they not be used either to reward or penalize an employe. In other words, they wouldn't be used, as they are now, to promote and to discharge employes, unless the agencies themselves decided they should be used for that purpose.

Furthermore, it's likely that a simple rating plan or either "satisfactory" or "unsatisfactory" would be used by most agencies if Congress okays the Civil Service proposal.

STORY: A 20-year-old girl from rural Missouri came here the other day to take a clerical job with the Army. She was awed and overwhelmed by the mammoth Pentagon Building where she was to work. As she got lost trying to find her way to the personnel office she quickly figured out that more people worked in the Pentagon building than lived in her entire county in Missouri; that the 25,000 who worked in the Pentagon were about eight times the number that lived in her home town.

She was reeling from the impressive size of the Pentagon when she finally reached the personnel office. But she was set back on her heels when she was told:

"You'll have to report for work next week. We haven't a single available place in this building for you to work."

AGRICULTURE: It wouldn't need to make reductions in its meat inspection staff or in the Soil Conservation Service research activities under the budget approved by the Russell subcommittee of the Senate appropriations subcommittee.

The House had voted a reduction of $582,000 for the Bureau of Animal Industry which would have forced the discharged of 184 meat inspectors. The Russell subcommittee recommended restoration of the full amount. Also, the House cut $657,000 from Soil Conservation's research fund which would have forced the discharge of about 150 people in that work. The Russell subcommittee not only restored the full amount for research, but it added $100,000 which would enable SCS to add about 25 new workers.

As the bill now stands, SCS would be able to hire about 900 new workers, mainly to service 117 new soil conservation districts. Production and Marketing Administration would have funds to hire more than 400 new people.

RFC: New lay-offs are in the works for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The agency is now down to about 4600 employes from a wartime high of more than 12000. It had hoped to shakedown to postwar size and to stabilize its employment by this time.

However, the House voted a cut of $1,374,000 in its administrative expenses—a slash that would have forced the firing of 250 additional employes. RFC officials appealed to the Senate Appropriations Committee to restore the entire amount. The committee recommended restoration of $750,000 which would mean the lay-off of about 120 employes if it's approved.

GIRL TROUBLE: The Army, it seems, is having trouble with its G-girls at the Argentia base at far-off Gander, Newfoundland. It had depended for clerical and secretarial help on more than 100 Newfoundland girls even though they weren't as efficient as some of the Army officers thought they should be.

So, three girls were imported from Nova Scotia and given top-rank secretarial jobs. Also, the Nova Scotia girls were allowed to eat in the officers' club which was out-of-bounds for the Newfoundland girls and they were given other privileges.

The Newfoundland girls squawked—and loud—at the discrimination. The Newfoundland Governor protested to the commanding general, who is trying to calm down the jealous G-girls.

Housing Bill To Be Passed About as Is, Spence Says

Banking Committee Chairman Addresses AVC Conference at National Museum

Chairman Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking and Currency Committee yesterday predicted to an American Veterans Committee housing conference that a billion-dollar housing bill will pass the House "substantially as it has been introduced."

The measure, now in the House Banking and Currency Committee, authorizes a 7-year program for construction of 1,050,000 low rent public housing units, plus a farm housing program and housing research. A Senate-approved version of the same housing and slum clearance bill, would provide construction of 810,000 units over a six-year period.

Spence was one of several speakers at the opening session of the two-day housing conference, attended by 145 delegates from 20 States.

Interrupted from Floor

The "plenary session" in the National Museum auditorium was marked by several noisy interruptions from the floor, all ruled out of order by the AVC National chairman, Gilbert A. Harrison.

Predicting final passage of the Administration's housing bill were Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) and Raymond Foley, Federal Housing and Home Finance administrator.

Also speaking at the meeting was John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority, who later conducted the delegates on a tour of the city's slums.

New Yorker Begins Protest

First of the several interruptions from the floor occurred at the start of the meeting when Max Glassman, New York delegate, stated angrily to the group that:

"National AVC headquarters has been sending us a housing program which eliminates the question of rent control and of segregation. I would like . . ."

Harrison silenced Glassman with the remark that "I don't think we're going to use this meeting which has been called for housing to engage in interminable political battle."

"We're here for action," he continued, and went on to outline conference objectives as: 1. Final passage of the multi-billion dollar slum clearance and home construction bill.

2. Passage of a Republican sponsored bill, authorizing direct Federal loans to cooperatives and other nonprofit housing groups, and aimed at providing middle income housing. The bill is now pending in the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Floridian Also Ruled Out

Later in the meeting, Glassman again rose, this time to challenge Harrison's right to appoint members of a resolutions committee, picked to work out the agenda for today's 2 p. m. plenary session.

Harrison angrily ruled out of order this interruption, and another by Matthew Smith of Florida, who told reporters later he wished to present a measure for "self-supporting public housing" for approval at the session.

Final attempts by several members to gain recognition by outshouting objections from the chair, were downed by an avalanche of boos, stamps, and shouts of disapproval from other session delegates.

Visits to congressional offices and the Whitehouse are scheduled for this morning by AVC delegates. A final general session will be held at 2 p. m. at Commerce Department Auditorium.

Carrier Boys To Be Guests At Bond Rally

Washington's 7000 newspaper-carrier boys will be honor guests this week at a special rally in the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds, scheduled to launch them on participation in a Nation-wide United States Savings Bond sales campaign.

The rally—complete with several Hollywood stars—will begin at 9:45 a. m. Friday.

Along with carrier boys throughout the Nation, Washington carriers will aid in the new Treasury Department bond drive by passing out literature and delivering sales talks to their customers.

The National E-Bond drive will be officially opened May 16 at Independence, Mo., with a $1,400,000,000 national quota. Washington's goal is 12 million dollars.

Coordinator of the carrier boys' program here is Gordon Leech of the Washington Times-Herald.

The proposed bond leaflet distribution by the boys is the first of its kind in newspaper history, according to Ray Mack, circulation manager of the Washington Daily News and organizer of the Sylvan Theater program.

Police and Firemen Paid Too Little, Davenport Says at Communion Breakfast

Representative Davenport (D., Pa.) yesterday urged more pay for police and firemen, more women in Congress, abolition of excise taxes on so-called "luxuries," and more work by the Catholic Church among Negroes.

His audience of 475 members and guests of the Catholic Police and Firemen's Society, attending their 15th annual communion breakfast at the National Press Club, cheered his pay and tax suggestions.

The breakfast, which was also addressed by Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army vice chief of staff, followed a special mass celebrated at St. Patrick's Church by the Rev. Thomas B. Dade, assistant pastor.

Police and firemen, led by the police band, paraded to the church and from the church to the Press Club.

"I am one of those who believe that policemen and firemen don't receive remuneration comparable to their importance and their responsibilities," Davenport declared. "You may be assured that you have a friend in Congress, and I am always at your disposal."

Davenport said he wanted to lead a movement to abolish the so-called "luxury" taxes, saying that such taxes are applied to necessities.

"The same goes for fur coats," he declared as the women applauded," and whoever said a wedding ring was a luxury?"

Davenport said he thought the Catholic Church should do more work for Negroes. Catholicism, he explained, is a "natural thing for such a spiritual people, and as a matter of fact, it is spreading in the South."

Catholics, who he said were objects of discrimination in the days when his mother was a girl in Pennsylvania, should do more to help those minority groups who "suffer indignities and discrimination," he declared.

General Collins told the group that the Military Police units in the Army were "highly essential," and that he and Gen. Omar Bradla previous decision which would have abolished MPs from the Regular Army.

Father Dade, chaplain of the society, said in his sermon that holiness does not consist of doing extraordinary things, but of doing ordinary things extraordinarily well.

Toastmaster was Pvt. John B. Richards of the Fire Department, president of the society.

Roberts was treated for lacerations of right leg and forehead.

In the Eason car, Ira Eason was hospitalized for face injuries and possible internal injuries.

Mrs. Nellie Eason, his wife, 45, also of Catlett, was hospitalized for fractured left leg.

Caroline Eason, 21 months, a granddaughter, of 3457 S. Kemper dr., Arlington, Va., bruises, treated.

Timothy Eason, 10 months, a grandson of the driver, also of the Arlington address, hospitalized for internal injuries and bruises, critical.

Two women were injured early yesterday when an automobile driven by Ulysses W. Richardson, 33, 644 Columbia rd. nw., struck a telephone pole on the Baltimore blvd. at College Park, Md. Richardson, who told Prince Georges County police at Hyattsville, that he fell asleep, was charged with reckless driving, and released on bond for a hearing May 16 in Hyattsville Police Court.

Two pedestrians were injured in a freak accident about noon yesterday on Wisconsin ave. at Van Ness st. nw. Phillip W. Rowe, 22, a student at the University of Maryland, and Miss Ruth H. Amackey, 21, 3725 Van Ness st. nw., stepped from a streetcar loading platform as an automobile passed. The driver was Emmett W. Temple, 48, 312 S st. nw. The handle of a power mower protruding from the rear of the car struck both the pedestrians in the head. They were treated at Emergency Hospital

Three persons were injured, one critically, at 2:30 a. m. yesterday when a car operated by Mrs. Jessie Frankland, 56, 1418 Mount Vernon ave., Alexandria, Va., ran off the road at Nichols ave. near Howard rd. se. and struck a telegraph pole.

Mrs. Frankland, who was treated for cuts and bruises at Gallinger Hospital, told police her car was forced from the road by another, which failed to stop.

Philemon Lloyd, 49, 3303 5th st. se., was admitted to the hospital with a possible skull fracture and was believed in critical condition. Daniel Ogden, 30, stationed at Bolling Field, was treated for cuts and bruises.

Wheel Gone, Naval Plane Crash Lands

With one landing wheel gone, a Navy pilot yesterday safely crash-landed his crippled plane at Patuxent Naval Air Base afteer circling the base for 2½ hours to burn up his remaining fuel as a precautionary measure.

The wheel and part of the axle had crashed to the ground at Anacostia Naval Air Station after the plane had taken off for a return flight to Patuxent. Information was not immediately available as to what caused the landing gear to break away.

The flier, Chief Aviation Pilot Charles E. Folz, assigned to Patuxent, guided the craft, a twin-engine Beechcraft utility plane, to a belly landing, with the remaining wheel up, along the grass bordering the airstrip.

The plane slithered several hundred feet to a stop in what the Navy described as "a routine crash landing." Folz was unhurt and the craft suffered only minor damage.

Folz, earlier had dropped off 4 passengers at Anacostia Naval Air Station. Among them was a Brig. Gen Harbaugh, described as en route to Washington from Europe. (They Army-Navy Register for 1948 lists a Lt. Col. James S. Harbaugh jr.)

Immediately after Folz took off from Anacostia at 2:15 p.m. for the trip back to Patuxent, the gear fell from his plane to the runway.

Patuxent officials were notified and another craft was flown to Anacostia to pick up the gear for examination.

Racial Angle Discerned in Hostility to Home Rule

Kefauver Calls Some Opposition Due to Fear of Negroes' Election in District

Part of the oposition to home rule is based on fear that Negroes might be elected to the District Government, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said yesterday.

Kefauver, chairman of the District subcommittee which drafted the Washington home rule bill, in an off-the-cuff radio interview with Charles Parmer over Station WPIK, Alexandria, said:

"Frankness compels me to say that part of the latent opposition to home rule is that there might be Negroes elected in the government, here in the District of Columbia."

Entitled To Vote

The Senator, some of whose forebears fought for the Confederacy, declared: "We have good citizens, white and colored, here. I think Negroes are entitled to vote wherever they are. They are American citizens.

"As a matter of fact, we have a whole lot smaller percentage of Negroes in the District of Columbit than we have in Richmond, New Orleans, Memphis, Atlanta. There is no objection to them participating in government there, and there should not be any here.

"They are entitled to it under the Constitution, and I am for giving them that right."

Racial Opposition

Subsequently, the Senator stated the latent opposition to home rule on racial grounds "should be fully explored and exposed."

Not only does it affect part of the District's population, he said, but "I am sure it also affects some members of both bodies of Congress." People both in and out of Congress have spoken to him about it, he explained, and added, "I am sure it has some bearing on the home-rule problem."

Support for home rule also was expressed in a letter from Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) to Kefauver.

O'Conor for Home Rule

O'Conor said that while Governor of Maryland for eight years he had "numerous opportunities to study at close range the problems of the District," and he favored "granting home rule to the citizens of the District, primarily in order that they may be citizens in every sense of the word.

"It is quite true that Congress needs to hold the control over the section of the District which it occupies," O'Conor said, "but its jurisdiction should extend no further than that."

Kefauver is confident that the home rule bill will be acted on at this session. The measure would give Washington a city council and city manager government.

Bandit Makes Victim Drive Several Miles

A Navy Gun Factory machinist yesterday reported he was held up, forced to drive his car for several miles and then robbed of $11.75 by a gunman in the early morning.

Lloyd T. Martin, 50, of 338 11th st. se., said he was about to drive away from the 300 block of F st. nw., when the bandit got into his car, flourished a pistol and ordered him to drive on.

Martin said that at 5th st. and Florida ave. ne., the bandit forced him from the car, took his wallet, then forced him back into the car and ordered him to drive to 26th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., where the man fled. He told police the bandit was a Negro, wearing a light gray suit and hat and a sport shirt.

In another robbery report, Ethel Rose Terrell of 1424 Massachusetts ave. nw. said she had started to open the door at 437 I st. nw., when a man snatched her pocketbook, containing $175 in cash, from her arm.

Willie Smith, 24, of 1202 Easton rd. se., said he was yoked and robbed of $47 by two boys while he was walking in the 300 block of G st. sw.

Solomon Mack of 1101 O st. nw., told police that in the 1300 block of 8th st. nw. he was knocked down and robbed of $8, by two men.

Mount Rainier City Officials' Induction Tonight

Mayor-elect Herbert W. Reichelt and four city council members of Mounty Rainier, Md., will be inducted tonight after a parade through the city.

Oaths of office will be administered by Waverly W. Webb, clerk of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, at 8 p. m. in the city hall. Councilmen to be sworn in are Fred J. Richardson, 1st ward; Warren W. James, 2d ward; Robert G. Merson, 3d ward; and Gurney F. Thompson, 4th ward.

'Good Morning,'

Car Starter at Station Is Good-Will Envoy

By James E. Hague
Post Reporter

Washington, with more ambassadors per square foot than probably any other city in the world, has one who can't be found on any State Department protocol lists.

He is Eugene Wood, who daily dispenses diplomacy and good will on the transit passenger platforms at Union Station.

His official title is passenger representative of the Capital Transit Co.

But to those visitors who get their first impression of the Capital from him and to the hundreds of commuters whose day starts pleasantly because of his folksy greeting, he is a good-will ambassador of the first rank.

His task of squeezing the last passenger into nonstretching street cars and buses is enough to try any man's temper. But it apparently doesn't try his.

His day of duty on the platform, for downtown passengers outside Union Station starts at 6 a. m. But it doesn't really get moving until about 7:30.

For the next two hours, workers from points north, south and west of Washington converge on his platform as a way station en route to their jobs. Some come from as far as Harper's Ferry.

Eugene Wood salutes Miss Rosalee Murphy, of 5415 Belt ave.

The men invariably get a "Good Morning, Son," from 70-year-old Mr. Wood. The women, a "Good morning, my dear lady." The regular riders know him well and stop at the platform edge to discuss affairs at home—how best to cut a lawn, raise a child.

Another will be met with a "Son, I hope you enjoy your ride. Come see us every morning."

As the passengers start aboard the streetcar, he chants: "And now, good folkses, have 13 cents or a token in your right hand," interpolating an occasional "Good morning, son" to a latecomer.

As the car fills up, he leans inside and implores:

"Now good folkses, won't you all move to the rear of the car? A lot more of my good people want to go to work, too. Move right on back, folkses."

Finally, when the car is bulging, he turns to the driver and commands: "Awright, son, let 'er roll."

More friends appear, another car comes, and the scene is repeated.

The rest of his day is more leisurely, but rush or quiet, his good will carries him along. Someone who wants to find an "Alice Jones who come here three days ago," gets a good deal of sympathy and, almost without exception, assistance which leads to a reunion.

And there was the time when "Two good women from Chicago" didn't want to leave Washington without knowing the meaning of the three towering flagpoles outside the terminal. Mr. Wood, wanting to send everyone away happy, extemporized an answer which is his secret to this day.

His even temper has been seasoned by almost half a century in transit work. He joined the Washington Railway and Electric Co. in 1901 as a conductor and during World War 1 put in his first stint on the Union Station platforms.

In 1941, he went back to the terminal, has been there since, and obviously finds his lot a happy one.

He lives with his wife at 310 2nd St., ne.

C. T. Revere Dies; Was Drama Editor

Clinton T. Revere, 80, partner in the New York brokerage firm of Laird, Bissell & Meeds, and former dramatic editor of The Washington Post, died yesterday in Roosevelt Hospital, New York.

Mr. Revere

Mr. Revere, whose home was in Westfield, N. J., was an expert in cotton and wrote widely on it and other subjects.

He represented the United States as a guest speaker at the International Cotton Congress in Paris in 1931, in Rome in 1935 and in Cairo in 1938.

Born in San Francisco, he attended the public schools there, studied law and was admitted to the bar, and practiced for a time. He then entered the newspaper business and became dramatic editor of The Washington Post.

Going to New York City, he was induced to enter the cotton market in 1903 by Daniel J. Sully, an old-time cotton king. He was cotton economist for the brokerage firm of Munds, Winslow & Potter for many years before he became a partner in Laird, Bissell & Meeds.

He was a member of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange, the Commodity Exchange, and the New York Cocoa Exchange, and president of the Commodity Club of New York.

He was also the author of a novel, "Hands as Bands," published in 1932.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Harriette Winn Revere, and three daughters: Miss Anne Revere, film actress who won an academy award for her role in "National Velvet" in 1945; Mrs. H. M. Rode and Mrs. Lawrence Beale Smith, and a son, Dr. Seth D. Revere.

Funeral services will be private.

In Memoriam

SMALL, THEODORE PERRY, on May 9, 1946.

Thought we thought you a gift, we were selfish dear.
God lent loaned you to us for a while.
To gladden our home with your laughter,
Your love, and your dear baby smile;
The days were too happy to last, dear,
But we'll always remember, and pray
That our angel in heaven be waiting
To welcome us in some sweet day.
MOTHER, JANIE, HOWARD, GRANDMOTHER, GREAT-GRANDMOTHER AND AUNT.

SMALL, THEODORE PERRY, on May 9, 1946.

At twilight, when I sit alone
In the afterglow of setting sun,
I take my cherished memories out,
And count them over, one by one,
Jewels all, reflecting beauty
From joys we shared through all the years,
Each time—etched facet gleaming brightly
Through a misty veil of tears.
FRIEND, BISHOP D. M. HENSON.

County Has Its Official Tie-Breaker

LUDWOOD A. POPKINS,
... Fairfax tie-breaker

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Ludwood Ashby Popkins, a tall, country-spoken Virginian of 73 years, is Fairfax County's official tie-breaker.

When the six-member Fairfax Board of Supervisors splits 3-3 on just about anything, Popkins is rudely jarred from his normal role of retired farmer.

A police car rolls 20 miles to his neat brick home near Groveton, Va. Popkins is whisked back to the Court House—and casts the crucial vote.

His job as official tie-breaker is an official county job, created by law. He gets $25 for each tie he breaks.

Not Called in Two Years

But says Popkins: "I haven't been called in two years and I'd just as soon keep it that way."

During his 20 years as a tie-breaker—he was appointed by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) when Smith was Fairfax Circuit Court Judge—he can't remember a really major issue he has decided with his vote.

His "latest" hurry call came when the board split on whether to permit a blacksmith to set up shop on Duke st. extended. Popkins voted for the use permit.

Popkins says he is generally disenchanted with the tie-breaking profession because "it puts me on the spot."

Favors Deliberation

People, he thinks, tend to pressure him to vote this way or that.

The tie-breaking process should be a deliberate one, Popkins feels.

"A tie-breaker ought never jump at conclusions. It never takes me under two hours to make a decision."

In the same careful, deliberate way, Popkins ran his own farm for nearly 50 years before retiring three years ago.

In between farming, he's served 12 years on the Fairfax Electoral Board, and 25 years on the County Democratic Executive Committee.

Asked his opinion why his services have not been needed during the last two years, he replied.

"The present board has so much money to spend it hasn't got anything to argue about."

Miniature Rooms to Be on View

Thirty period rooms in miniature, created by Mrs. James Ward Thorne of Chicago in the scale of an inch to a foot, are to be shown in Washington through the courtesy of Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Corp., who acquired them for the company's Department of Fine Arts.

The exhibition will be open to the public on Tuesday, May 24, at the Washington World Affairs Center, 1712 H st., and continue for a month. Entire proceeds will go to the St. Lo committee under American Aid to France, of which Mrs. Robert Low Bacon is chairman.

Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, honorary president of the organization, is giving a luncheon on May 23, prior to the preview, for committee members and sponsors, at which Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commanding officer at St. Lo during its invasion and terrific bombing, and Mrs. Bradley, will be honor guests. The following day the rooms will be shown to the public from 10 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., and the following weekdays until May 31.

Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, honorary chairman of AAF, saw the beginning of the new hospital promised by America last summer when she visited St. Lo. She and members of the local sponsoring committee hope to raise the balance of the $40,000 during the exhibition here.

In the earliest room of the collection, the Jacobean Hall, which begins the style story in this series, is a Cromwell wall clock that exactly duplicates in miniature the one at the Victoria and Albert Museum in London. The ship model and objects on the mantel and dressers of the early American kitchen were discovered in Provincetown, Mass. The tea set, mirrors and console tables which create the charm of the Louis XVI salon came from Paris.

Members of Mrs. Bacon's sponsoring committee for the benefit exhibition are Mrs. Paul Bartlett, Mrs. Bliss, Mme. de Bekessy, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Raymond E. Cox, Mrs. Oscar Cox, Mrs. Dewey, Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap, Mrs. R. Gilpin Ervin, Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Harry K. Hickey, chairman of AAF, Mrs. Christian Herter, Mrs. Andre de Limur, Mrs. Walter Lippmann, Mrs. A. S. Monroney, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Bradley Nash, Mrs. Chauncey Parker, jr., Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Philip Strong, Mrs. Sigourney Thayer, Mrs. George Y. Worthington, jr., cochairman, AAF, and Mrs. Stanley Woodward.

Pavloff, Artist, To Show Portrait

Nicholas Pavloff, internationally known portrait painter, is in Washington for a month or so and is staying at the Shoreham Hotel.

On Thursday Mr. Pavloff will entertain at a cocktail party in the apartment of Mrs. Clarence Goodwin at the Shoreham. The party is especially planned for guests to view the recently completed portrait of Mrs. Goodwin which Mr. Pavloff started about a year ago.

Mr. Pavloff, Russian born, who became a United States citizen in 1922, has done portraits of distinguished men and women in a dozen countries. He is well known on both sides of the Atlantic and has recently returned from a three months stay in Nassau.

Among the portraits done by the artist are those of the former Secretary of War, Robert Patterson; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Stewart of Washington and Pittsburgh; Mme. Helene Rubenstein and Mrs. Clayton Adams.

Down Virginia Way

By Nina Carter Tabb

Leesburg, Va., May 8.—The Annual Foxcroft Horse Show in Middleburg opens Monday morning at 9:30 with the pony hack event, followed by three classes for Foxcroft School girls. There are 20 classes for hunters and jumpers in this show.

Among the open classes are the pony lead class, pony working hunters, model, green and working hunters, touch and out, junior hunter hacks, ladies hunters, Corinthian, hunt teams and grooms class.

For girls from the school there are officers jumping (over an Olympic course), bareback jumping beginners riding and beginners jumping, school team class and the alumnae class which is open to former Foxcraft School students.

Hunters championship and reserve awards will climax the Monday event which will be judged by Jack Prestage and Truman Dodson. Silver trophies and ribbons will be awarded in all classes except for the grooms event in which the award is cash.

The show is being handled by Mrs. Ruth Guiter and Miss Amy Hitchcock.

The wedding of Mrs. H. Burt Shaw of Onnavarra, Warrenton, Va. and Col. Hugh Waddell took place Saturday at Westhampton Beach, Long Island. The ceremony was attended by members of the immediate families.

The couple will sail May 14 for Ireland, where Colonel Waddell will be military attache at the United States Legation. A native of Mississippi and a West Point graduate, Colonel Waddell served as military aide at the White House during the Roosevelt Administration and has been military attache in Sweden.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Harry S. Burt of New York, has lived in Warrenton for a number of years.

Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan of New York is spending some time at her Virginia place, Brookemeade, near Upperville, Va.

I Really Mean It

The days and nights have disappeared . . . The weeks have walked away . . . And yet I well remember all . . . The words you used to say . . . The ever light and cheerful ones . . . And those that filled a sigh . . . And your unfinished phrases when . . . I saw you start to cry . . . I brought your heart unhappiness . . . And I accept the blame . . . Because I have no alibi . . . That would not sound too lame . . . And you may never want to hear . . . The words I long to say . . . Or even think about the dreams . . . Of any yesterday . . . But I am really sorry and . . . My sentiment is true . . . When I declared I love you and . . . I think the world of you.

Water Pollution Unit Meets Today

The Water Pollution Control Advisory Board will hold its first meeting here today and Tuesday, Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, Federal Security Agency, announced yesterday.

The board is to aid in development of a master plan for safeguarding the nation's water resources, but no money has yet been appropriated to carry out provisions of the Water Pollution Control Act under which the board is set up.

One of the board's immediate problems is the development of comprehensive programs for controlling pollution of interstate waters and tributaries.

Girl Who Loved Her Work in Nurse's Training Is Shocked Into Mental Depression When Fiance Breaks Away, Saying He Dislikes Her Vocation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Do you know why a young man would object to his girl's taking up the profession of nursing? My daughter Kay has recently completed her first year in nurse's training and it is all she had hoped it would be. Her marks are good and she enjoys working with the patients and doctors.

Her problem is Kirk, her boy friend, 20, with whom she has been going for the past two years. He has finished high school and now drives a delivery truck. They had planned to be married when Kay finished her training; but three months ago he told her that he no longer cared to go with a student nurse. He gave no reason for his decision; and Kay lapsed into a bad state of depression.

Kirk is a likable boy and seemed very happy with Kay until about four months ago, when he became very sullen. He wrote to her recently, telling what a wonderful time he is having and saying that he has no trouble finding plenty of companionship.

Kay wasn't urged to become a nurse. Her mind has been fixed on the nursing vocation since she was 15. However, I am gravely concerned about her recent depression, and although I keep hoping that she will forget Kirk and meet someone else, I also wonder if it is foolish for a girl to spend her years from 18 to 21 in the strict confinement that nurse-training requires. I would appreciate your discussion of the whole subject. S. S.

Man Is Fighting Phantom Rivals

DEAR S. S.: Back in the days when Kay's grandfather was young—say 50 years ago,—it was the fashion amongst average men to think that members of the nursing profession weren't quite "lady-like,"—meaning that nurses were too well schooled in "the facts of life" to be quaintly ignorant, prudish and gullible.

However, the general acceleration of popular education since grandpa's day, designed to acquaint all the people with sensible knowledge of human biology and correct health care, has almost entirely washed away that narrow thinking.

Thus if any young man tries to assert it today, in disparagement of nursing as a vocation, his honesty is open to question. One is entitled to say to him, "Take off the false whiskers, brother, and let's see what is sticking in your craw." And such is my reaction to Kirk's sulky blow at Kay, the significance of which he gives away in his recent braggart letter.

Silver Lining in This Cloud

IT SEEMS he is bitterly jealous of Kay's delight in her vocation, and her success in her first year's training, and her associations with patients and doctors whom she likes. In a sense, he is punishing Kay for his inferiority feelings which tell him he is licked in competition with the various array of "interesting" men she describes. But also he is trying to put a don't-care face on a defeatist conviction.

In dealing Kay a blow that he couldn't explain, he was trying to get in there first with a turndown that he felt Fate had in store for him. And it's absurdly childish and dishonest of him to write that he's having a wonderful time nursing his sore head with the help of abundant companionship.

In my opinion, Kay would do well to stick to the strict confinement of nurse-training for the next two years, if Kirk is the only special interest she has outside it. I think she deserves far better than his stunted behavior offers, hence should be thankful he has bowed out, leaving her unfettered to grow in her work, and thus become a candidate for mature, sympathetic mate love. M. H.

Panama Canal Society Plans Dinner May 14

The Panama Canal Society of Washington will give its annual dinner-reunion this year on May 14 at the Broadmoor Hotel. Honor guest will be Maurice Thatcher, former member of the Isthmian Canal Commission; Governor of the Canal Zone and onetime Representative from Kentucky.

Mrs. Thatcher, vice president of the Panama Canal Auxiliary, the ladies' unit, will preside at a dinner at the same hour with the wives, daughters and sisters who lived on the Isthmus during the construction years. Later they will join the society members for the program which will follow. Senora de Vallarino, wife of the Panama Ambassador, will be a guest at this fete.

While in Congress Mr. Thatcher was author of legislation providing for the establishment of the permanent ferry across the Panama Canal and for the building of a connecting roadway on the west side of the Canal. Both ferry and roadway were officially named in his honor.

Col. William D. Wrightson, president of the society, is in charge of the program and Joseph A. Cheeseman is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The program will consist of songs and dances in native Mexican and South American costumes under the direction of Mrs. Basil Berg. Designed to stimulate the study of Spanish, the fiesta is open to the public. A number of embassy children will participate.

Ask Anne About Removing Stains

How can I remove stains made by curry sauce? The stains are on a white linen blouse. So far all I have done is soak the blouse in lukewarm water without soap. The stains are bright yellow. I should also like to know how to remove mustard stains. W. C.

Since the stains are on white linen, use a bleach to remove them. Dampen the stained area and stretch it over a bowl of hot water. Using half-and-half mixture of household bleach and water, drop the bleach onto the stain. Let act for a minute, then dip into the water to stop action. Repeat until all stain is removed. Be sure to rinse three times in clear water to completely remove the bleach from the fabric.

To remove mustard stains, work glycerine or liquid shampoo soap into the dampened stain. Rub lightly between the hands and rinse. Repeat as long as some stain is removed. If this doesn't completely remove the stain and the fabric is white you could use bleach to finish removing it following the directions given above.

Can you tell me how I can remove wax stains from chairs upholstered in velvet? I do not wish to use hot iron and blotting paper because the iron will mark the velvet. Is there any known solvent for candle wax which won't stain? T. P.

Since it is so difficult to remove stains from upholstery, if this is a valued piece and especially if the upholstery is light, I suggest you turn the job over to the professional upholstery cleaner. If, however, you wish to try to remove it yourself, sponge the stained area with soft, lintless cloth which has been moistened with carbon tetrachloride. Do not use enough of the solvent to soak the upholstery and use a light upward motion so as to flatten the pile. When as much as possible has been removed, dampen some corn starch with carbon tetrachloride (not enough to make it wet, just damp) and work this into the stained area. Let stand 20 minutes to absorb oil and brush away or remove with the brush attachment of your vacuum sweeper. This treatment can be repeated as often as you see improvement.

How can I prevent my mattresses from having a musty odor during the warm summer months? S. S. B.

When mattresses have an odor there is usually some moisture present. In the summer, it could be absorbed from the air. So, one way to reduce or eliminate the trouble would be to place the mattresses in the sun for a day or so for complete sunning and airing. If this isn't possible, then go over both sides of the mattress with the brush attachment of the vacuum sweeper to remove any dust present. Then spray both sides lightly with the odor removing solution in a bottle with a wick. Be sure to let the mattress dry completely before putting on the bed covers. Keeping a heavy, always clean padding on top of the mattresses under the sheet will help to prevent trouble from odor. Also, inclosing the entire mattress in one of the plastic covers which zip shut will prevent absorption of moisture and lessen trouble from odor.

We're planning a move soon to a Midwestern city and would appreciate any helps or hints you might give us on packing—particularly glassware and china. Is it better to pack crockery in a barrel or would movers be equally careful if they're put in corrugated cartons? In which would breakage be less? R. S. B.

For a long distance move, any breakable articles should be put into barrels—corrugated cartons are not heavy enough to protect the contents from breakage and they are not made strongly enough to hold any amount of weight. The firm which is doing your moving will probably be able to provide you with barrels and excelsior with which to pack. Or, in the case of your fine china and glassware, at least, the movers have experts who will do the packing for you. There is an additional charge for this service, based upon the number of barrels they pack, but since china and glassware represent a considerable investment these days, it is well worth while. Expertly packed, your china will be guaranteed to travel hundreds of miles without a chip. If you do the packing yourself there can be no such guarantee. Since the investment in crockery is not so great you may wish to pack it yourself—but it should be packed in barrels.

C. U. Musical Is Zestful Frolic

By Richard L. Coe

IN "THANK YOU, JUST LOOKING," Catholic University has a merry musical revue which you will certainly enjoy. It would be wise to make your plans now to catch this before its closing on Saturday night, May 21.

When well handled, the intimate revue is the most pleasurable entertainment imaginable. It can be clever, brisk, tuneful, satiric, sentimental. "Thank You, Just Looking" is all of these and its people are delightfully likable.

Lacking a professional theater, this is as close as our outpost of civilization will this year come to the revival of the intimate revues Gotham lately has been enjoying. While I'm not saying this approaches the ineffable insanity of New York's "Lend an Ear," its material is certainly superior to that of "Inside U. S. A.," though this inescapably cannot boast Lady Peel. I'm sure it's vastly superior to "All for Love," which expired Saturday night despite a year of million-dollar surgery by Tony Farrell. Maybe Mr. Farrell would have learned something from the C. U. speech and drama department.

For the over-all effectiveness of this little revue lies in the generalship which has whipped words, songs and people into a diverting evening. I'm not saying this is sensational Broadway material, but it is a good example of how the auslanders can make entertainment while the inbred New York theater world seeks to please only Broadway and to ignore potential audiences.

Writing about specific features of a revue is always dangerous, for the inclination to whet the appetite easily results in giving surprises away. I would like to tell you, for instance, of my favorite of Jean and Walter Kerr's sketches, "Gorilla Girl." This concerns the making of one of those animal movies and is a saucy Hollywood jibe you should see for yourself. There is another sketch on the war books which ancient warriors will relish, a cheerful comment on ladies too softened to sweets and a first-act finale that gives you "Hamlet" as it might have been had Rodgers, Hammerstein, and others slipped their cogs.

The music is by the group's only outsider, Jay Gorney, whose stage and film tunes include "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime," Shirley Temple's "Baby, Take a Bow," and that "Meet the People" revue which introduced Nanette Fabray, Virginia O'Brien and June Haver.

"This Is the Church," for a pleasing ensemble dance suggesting Grandma Moses, titled "American Primitive," is his sentimental contribution, and it's a pretty tune. "Something Borrowed, Something Blue" and "Who Goes Home" are novelties in torch songs and, come to think of it, so is "It'll Be All Right in a Hundred Years." On the clever side is "This Had Better Be Love," boasting excellent lyrics.

The company has that facility that never fails to impress G. U. visitors. I was especially captivated by Judy Avallone, who seems to be an old favorite with a new name. The Avallone has a charming manner and voice that comes to the fore in a sentimental number, "Mr. Brown, Miss Dupree." Rickie Rudel, Virginia Bradley and Betty Madigan handle most of the songs and the department is indeed lucky to have such voices AND good diction.

I don't seem to recall seeing Pete Donahue before, but his performance as an impatient gorilla deserves a prize; he's also immensely effective in a male trio, "Highbrow, Middlebrow and Lowbrow." Where has Pete been hiding? Dick Sykes proves a handy performer in top roles for many of the sketches, as do Jill Leahy, Ed McMahon, Louis Camuti, J. Robert Dietz, Teddy Marie and Bill McGuire.

I might tell you, too, of the second act opening, having to do with housekeeping, of the dances arranged by Nancy Mullen and Louise Soelberg, the spick and span costumes by Joseph Lewis, the effective pianistic orchestra of Jimmy Smiley and Sidney Seidenman, jr., the well-timed lighting by James Waring and Edward Cashman's choral direction.

But you'll enjoy it more by discovering "Thank You, Just Listening" on your own.

Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick, head of Madison Square Garden, was in the Stork Club discussing the get-rich-quick schemes of young college graduates, who frequently spend their first postschool years in searching for immediate fortune. One of them approached General Kilpatrick with an idea: He had just returned from Mexico where he obtained an option to buy a rare kind of shark-oil at $5 a gallon. "It sells in New York for $20 a gallon," he added, "and if we go into this deal, we can make more than 300 per cent profit on each shipment" . . . Kilpatrick was interested, and started to investigate. He discovered that the young man's report was accurate: It did cost only $5 a gallon in Mexico, and sold for $20 here. "But the only thing it could be used for," sighed Kilpatrick, "was to oil watch-works, at a few drops per watch—and 5 gallons a year would be more than enough to cover the market."

When Humphrey Bogart was asked how he liked co-producing as well as starring in "Tokyo Joe," he said: "It's roughly comparable to taking instructions in schizophrenia."

GWU to Offer Journalism as Major Subject

George Washington University will offer journalism as a major subject for the first time next fall, it was announced yesterday.

Students may major in journalism for a bachelor of arts degree, Dr. Elbridge Colby, head of the journalism department announced.

Those majoring in this subject will be required to take additional classes in public relations, editorial writing and law of the press.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bladensburg Man Acts Like a Texan

Larry Woltz of 7400 Hopkins ave., College Park, Md., wonders whether I've ever heard of the Bladensburg resident who took a world tour.

Every place he went, guides pointed out the wonders to be found in other lands. But always the Bladensburg man yawned and said that his home town boasted something bigger or better.

Finally they showed him the only active volcano in the world and asked: "Do you have a volcano like this in Bladensburg?"

"No," admitted the tourist, "but I'll bet we've got enough high water to put that rascal out!"

SUGGESTION

The next time Traffic Director Keneipp doesn't have anything else to do, he might take a look at the timing of the lights at 13th and E sts. nw.

Southbound traffic on 13th st. first gets the equivalent of a "full green." It may move straight ahead, right or left.

But in a few seconds the "turn" lights go off, and only through traffic is permitted—and that ties the corner into knots.

More cars turn there than go straight through. Result: One auto will stop in the right lane, waiting for the next right arrow; and another will stop in the left lane, waiting for the next left arrow. Nobody will move—not even the lone car in back that would like to take advantage of the through arrow.

It doesn't make much sense to stack up traffic at a busy intersection.

SQUARE MEAL

During the recent Congressional hearings on our public golf courses, Concessioner S. G. Leoffler prepared a statement on his personal and business background. One paragraph tickles my funnybone:

"In 1920 I invented and patented a doughnut machine that would turn out a square doughnut. This was not a profitable venture."

FLASH! BIG EXPOSURE!

John M. McGrath of 2600 S. 16th st., Arlington, Va., explains why I've been having so much trouble with photographic "flash numbers."

My confusion arose from the fact that the manufacturers of flash bulbs publish one set of numbers; manufacturers of films a second set; and manufacturers of flash guns still a third set—and no two sets come anyplace close to agreeing. In some instances there's a difference of almost 100 per cent.

Mac says it all depends on who is telling the story, and why.

The flash bulb people give what amounts to the maximum performance of their bulbs, under ideal conditions.

The film manufacturers advise lens settings which are based on "average" conditions. They tend to be conservative, because modern films can stand a good bit of overexposure.

And the folks who make the flash guns give the readings which are specially recommended for that particular outfit—rather than for some "average" or "ideal" setup.

Result: Three different versions, because the three different manufacturers are talking about unsimilar situations.

As Al Novak of 14-F Laurel Hill, Greenbelt, Md., puts it:

"The fixed factors are the bulb and the film. The variable is the efficiency of the reflector. The man who made it wants you to get good pictures with it—so use his numbers."

Incidentally, an old hand in our Washington Post darkroom offers this advice: "If you overexpose, that can be remedied. But there isn't much we can do if you underexpose, and fail to get the picture."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I am a cadet-midshipman at Pass Christian, Miss. Through my room-mate, who gets the mail edition of The Washington Post, I've become a reader of your column, and I've noticed the name of Traffic Director George Keneipp in it.

Since my name is also Keneipp, and since this is a very rare name, I wonder if George Keneipp and I are related. I'm originally from Harrisburg, Ill.

Dear Glenn:

Well, whadda ya know! George says his stepfather's people were also from southern Illinois, and he'd be glad to hear from you. Small world, eh? Bill

ADD NAMES

Lillian O'Neill of 8501 Dixon ave., Silver Spring, Md., wonders whether we noticed that two recently elected members of the Barnesville (Md.) Town Council are: Miss Morningstar and Mr. Moon.

THIS IS "INSTITUTIONAL ADVERTISING" IN REVERSE

Mrs. J. L. Trice of 915 Church st., Alexandria, Va., thinks that we choose a mighty poor way to identify our Sunday Society Section.

She points out that the box in the upper left-hand corner of the page reads: "Marriages—Clubs," which is obviously an unhappy association of ideas, and a knock for a fine old institution.

(I know, I know: "Who wants to live in an institution?")

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Russia to Cement German Ties

By Drew Pearson

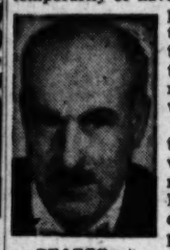
Biggest question mark in the minds of every diplomat is whether the Russians have merely got soft temporarily or have made a major policyshift toward long-term cooperation with the rest of the world.



PEARSON

No diplomat, to date, dares venture a definite answer. However, uncensored reports from Germany give one significant clew.

Recently the Russians have been getting advice from Rudolf Nadolny, former German Ambassador to Russia. Nadolny is not a Communist, is a German of Hungarian extraction, and a disciple of Bismarck, who always favored close cooperation between Germany and Russia.

Nadolny's advice to Moscow has been to cut out the diplomatic bluster, and talk softly to the West, while simultaneously strengthening Russian-German ties.

If Moscow extends the olive branch to western Europe and the United States, Nadolny is reported to have advised, Western opinion will be lulled and Congress will not appropriate full funds for the North Atlantic Pact.

German-Russian Alliance?

In addition, Nadolny met with German leaders last month and gave them significant advice that Germany's future lay with Russia. The way Nadolny sized it up was reported to be about as follows:

If there is peace, Russia can give far more to Germany than the Allies for two reasons:

1. She controls Silesia and can return it.

2. Britain and the United States are hungry for markets. If there is no war this competition for markets will become keener, and Britain and the United States will keep Germany an agrarian state. Meanwhile Russia has ample markets in China and offers no competition to Germany.

If, on the other hand, there is war, Nadolny said he had positive assurances that Germany would be spared. The Red Army, he promised, would advance either through Norway or Italy.

Result was the stiff position taken by the western German leaders at Bonn, when they first turned down Gen. Lucius Clay's proposals for a western German state. It was only after the Big Three foreign ministers granted concessions that the western German charter of government finally was accepted.

Phony Telegrams

Not since the holding-company fight of 1935, when the private utility lobby bombarded Congress with telegrams signed with names taken from a telephone directory, has Capitol Hill been deluged with so many phony telegrams and letters as in the current drive against public housing.

One of the lobby's most ingenious schemes is being worked on California Congressmen by an organization with the high-sounding name, Committee for Home Protection. Congressmen may not realize it, but this is merely a front for the powerful National Association of Home Builders.

Its general chairman, Frederick C. Dockweiler, also happens to be general counsel of the Los Angeles Home Builders Institute, while in the background is multimillionaire Fritz B. Burns, biggest West Coast builder and former president of National Home Builders.

However, California Congressmen would be even more amazed if they knew how the folks are being used by the Committee for Home Protection. Here is how the lobby operates:

Committee agents approach citizens on the street, give them a "facts sheet," containing 10 sample telegrams denouncing public-housing legislation, and ask them to select one, copy it on a telegraph blank provided by the lobby's agent, and sign it.

When 20 such "canned" telegrams have been collected, they are sent to a member of Congress. The latter assumes the telegrams are legitimate messages from the voters back home.

In addition to the "facts sheet," which lobby agents hand to the public, they also have an "instruction sheet," which they are very careful not to hand out. These confidential instructions are a dead giveaway. This is what they say:

"1. Select your prospect. Get a man who has absolutely no connection with the building or real estate business. This is a 'grass roots' campaign; so look for laborers, white-collar workers, veterans, housewives, small-shop keepers—people in the middle and lower income brackets.

"2. Show your prospect your facts sheet.

"3. Ask him to write his message on a telegraph blank. Get him to select his favorite argument and state that in a maximum of 25 words. Included in this message should be a statement of his occupation or affiliation, such as: 'I am a bus driver,' 'I am a housewife,' 'I am a veteran,' etc.

"4. Get your prospect to sign his name and address. Getting both the name and address is very important. It proves to that Congressman that this voter lives in his district. Also, it gives the campaign office (lobby headquarters) a double check, so that we can be sure the telegram is going to the right Congressman.

"5. Send your telegram to the campaign office. Send your telegram, written in the prospect's own handwriting immediately to Frederick C. Dockweiler, chairman, Committee for Home Protection, 672 West Washington blvd., Los Angeles 15. Here it will be checked and filed for delivery in Washington.

"Don't worry if neither you nor your prospect knows the name of his Congressman. Our campaign office will check the address and see that it goes to the proper man. For your general information, the map reproduced on the reverse side of this sheet lists our southern California delegation."

Pulling A Switch On The Weather

SAYS CHESTER BRAY, CHIEF ENGINEER OF THE HECHT CO.

Whoever said, "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it," didn't know Chester Bray . . . because Mr. Bray and his crew certainly do something about the weather. When it's hot out . . . they make it comfortably cool throughout The Hecht Co. When it's cold out . . . they see to it that it's healthfully warm inside. It's their job to keep The Hecht Co. comfortable for our associates . . . comfortable for your shopping pleasure. During the Summer months, cooling is obtained by recirculating chilled water supplied at the rate of 597,000 gallons per hour. (The same water is continuously reused and pumped through the system.) The heat removed from this water in a 24-hour period by our 7 giant compressors (2470 tons of refrigeration) . . . is sufficient to melt over 4,940,000 pounds of ice. That's enough ice to make an iceberg larger than the U. S. Navy's largest destroyer. On a hot Summer day 864,500 cubic feet of cooled air is circulated through the buildings every minute by 131 fan units. On chilly or cold days, ventilation and tempering of the air is accomplished by mixing fresh air with hot-water-treated air, then regulating it to the proper temperature for your shopping convenience. During the cold seasons, over 344,500 gallons of fuel oil are needed to fire the boilers which produce approximately 43,894 pounds of steam an hour. As a Hecht Co. customer it is most probable that these facts mean little to you . . . but take our word for it . . . the air you breathe inside the store has been scientifically filtered . . . cooled or heated . . . humidified or dehumidified for your comfort by the best equipment science and industry can furnish. And that's not all, Mr. Bray and his 24 assistants also provide for your safety by daily check-ups of The Hecht Co.'s 26 elevators and 18 escalators. "Pulling a switch on the weather . . . providing for the public's safety and comfort," says Mr. Bray, "are some of the things that make The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop."
